The Disease Called "Cancer. A contemporary has very truly remarked. that this disease is almost universally admitted by the medical fraternity, all over the world, to be one of the most incurable maladies that ever afflicted the human race. A cancer patient, therefore, is admonished to prepare for death as soon as the true character of the disease is developed. This is the reason why the word cancer sounds so fearfully to the human ear. The difficulty, or, in a majority of cases, the absolute impossibility, to cure it, has for centuries

why? Because we are unacustomed to such scenes; but let even tender hearted women become familiar with such exhibitions as the one in question, and they may soon be prepared to regard the execution of a criminal with complacement and as a sort of holiday affair. To say the least of public executions, they have a tendency to demoralize society, and the sooner the Legislature shall chaet that capital executions shall be performed in Jail yards 1 12 crisis," said Duncan, "didn't you hear the where the populace shall be excluded from view, the better So we think.

Spiced Vinegar.

In the winter of '47, while residing in New Orleans, a youth who stood about five feet eleven inches and three quarters in his stockings, who bailed from somewhere up the humor, because we cannot put in print the Wabash, was invited by a friend to dine at the sing-song style and appropriate gestures that same house where I was boarding. This was the Hoosier's first trip away from home, as he told My friends, sin makes the purtiest man or his friend, who was in the produce business, and woman in the world ugly-ah. And I'll tell had purchased his eargo of corn. As they took von how I know-ah: As I was coming up to their seat at the fable the youth told his friend church to-day-ah, I saw some young men in that he expected that he would show him all mended as to honesty and sobriety. Also a Clerk to the road-ah. And thought one of them was the sights of the town, as he wanted to let all

The servant brought him a plate of soup, and covered that they were playing ov marvels; observing a gentleman opposite put considerable catsup in his dish, our Hoosier pointed to a bottle of peppersauce and asked what it was.

> "Wal, s'pose you 'blige a feller by handing it "Certainly," was the answer.

"Spiced vinegar," was the reply.

The Hoosier took the bottle and commenced dousing it into his soup, but sa the sauce did not flow very freely, he took out the cork, at the same time observing to his friend-"Kinder close folks ver stoppin' with, to put such a plangy little hole in that cork, to prevent a feller takin' much of that 'ere stuff. I spose it comes high, don't it." During the time he had poured nearly a wine glass full into his soup, and taking his spoon he dipped it full, together with several peppers, and put it into his mouth. The next instant he spurted the contents of his spoon across into a French gentleman's bosom, and bawled-"Water! water! snakes and wild cats, give me some water! I'm all afire!" "By gar, sair," exclaimed the Frenchman in a rage, jumping up from the table, "you have speiled my shirt, my vest, sair. Spoiled everything sair. By gar, I shall see about this.

In the meantime the Hoosier had seized a pitcher containing water, and had taken a tremendous draught. Setting the pitcher down, he eyed the Frenchman for a moment, and then yelled-"Dod blast your old shirt! Spose I was going to burn my inards out for you or your old shirt? You cuss! Come down to the boat and I'll give you one of mine!" It was with difficulty that the Hoosier's friend could allay the Frenchman's rage, and set matters straight again. But ever after the "spiced vinegar" was a by-word, and sufficient to set the whole table in a roar.

One of Tom More's truthful obituaries: Here lies John Shaw, Attorney-at-law; And when he died, The Devil cried, Give us your paw, John Shaw, Attorney-at-law!
