Battle of Fort Moultrie. White Massachusetts and South Carolina are at issue in Congress, we would remind our citizens of the Palmetto Fort in 1776. Whatever others may think, we know that no battle of the Revolution stands on the record above that of Fort Moultrie. We publish from our Documentary History (vol. 8, now in press) the following letter from General (then Colo-nel) Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, which has never before been in print .- South Carolinian.

nouade. I therefore take the earliest opportunity of acquainting her with the particulars of it. As my station was at Fort Johnson, and the whole of the engagement was at Sullivan's Island, I was only a spectator, though I and every man here declared they longed carnestly to have been there to have partaken the honor and danger with their fellow soldiers. Yesterday about 11 o'clock the bomb ketch and a ship-of-war came up from Five-fathom Hole, and a signal was fired from the Commodore for the other ships-of-war to weigh anchor. At about 111 the ketch began to favor Sullivan's Island with some bombs. I could distinctly see many of them burst in the air. Five fell in the fort at Sullivan's Island, but did no other damage than slightly wounding one man. The Solebay, of 28 guns, which was ahead of the line, received a shot from the Island and immediately returned it with her tained his lair, and having decided in full conwhole broadside. The enemy then formed in two lines to attack the fort on Sullivan's Island. Solebay, of 28, the Active of 28 and a 40-gun ing at the top of their lungs. On hearing the vessel, which I am told is called the Roebuck, other frigates whose names I do not know; brings him down on them like a thunderbolt,

BY HIS EXCELLENCY THOMAS BRAGG, enemy appeared to us at this place to be about six or seven hundred yards from the Island, but from them I hear they were within 500 WHERAS, an act was passed by the last Gen- yards. All the twenty-six pounders were a long panse, an Arab advances in front of the eral Assembly of this State, by a vote of threepointed at the Bristol, and about two hours after the cannonading began, she received so much damage that she was obliged to draw briskly as before. At about 3 o'clock the Fort had expended all its ammunition, (it had thirty odd rounds to each gun and thirty two guns.) The shipping still kept up a heavy cannonade; the Fort could not return it. In about two hours they got a supply of 20 lbs. of gunpowder from of the State of North Carolina, and it is hereby Tufts', and 500 lbs. from Haddrell's Point. They fired again, but slowly and with great judgment. Night came on, and the cannonade still continued on both sides, and the greatest number of our shot (if we may judge from the noise they made against the sides of the ships) fired near fifty for one. A little after 9 o'clock the ships thought they were sufficiently battered and ceased firing, and half after nine began to work down again to their old station in Five Fathom Hole. One of the ships which ran aground got off again; the other (at least a twenty-gun ship) stuck fast there. Upon being fired at from the Island this morning, she returned the fire; were on board her loaded all their guns, set SEC. 2. as one of our men. The enemy's loss in men must have been considerable, as our shots were chiefly leveled at the hulls of the ships. The transports lay in Five Fathom Hole during the whole engagement. I assure you I never saw men in higher spirits than ours were during the whole cannonade; and though from our station here we were unfortunate enough to be out of it, there was not a man but was wishing most carnestly to be there.

The Fort, though well peppered with shot, has received scarcely any damage, not a single breach being made in it, nor did the Palmetto The Battle of Fort Moultrie.

***************** From the Westminster Review.

A Lion Hunt. No Arab thinks of attacking a lion unless supported by at least twenty muskets; and even then, if the lion is killed, it is not till he has committed serious damage in their ranks. For a long time they will suffer him to devastate their donars and carry off their cattle in helpless resignation. It is not till their losses have driven them to desperation, that they resolve on attacking him in his lair, and then they always choose the day time.- Having ascerclave that the attack is to be made, they assemble at the foot of the mountain, and in groups In the first line the Bristol of 50 guns, the of thirty or forty march towards the lair, shout-(I am not sure of her name, but certain of her the lioness does the same unless she has her noise, the lion, if young, at once quits the lair; strength, for I could plainly see her guns.) But, as he does not fly he is the second line was the Syren of 28 and two soon in sight, and a discharge of musketry behind them were the bomb ketch and a heavy If the lion is an adult he knows the meaning of hulk of a vessel something like our Prosper.

A brisk and heavy cannounde was kept up at first, both from the ships and the fort. Some sides against the trees, and shaking back his shot from the fort put their second line into majestic mane. He listens; and the approachsides against the trees, and shaking back his N. He then stalks bank of sand which runs out from the fort slowly towards the first ledge of rocks which towards Sullivan's Island, and then turns commands the country, and espying his enemies towards Cummin's Point (called the Lower from his height, he cronches and awaits. The Middle,) the two ships, whose names I do not Arab who first sees him, eries, "There he is!" know, ran aground there. The first line of the and deathlike stillness succeeds. They pause to contemplate him, and look well to their arms, while the lion slowly licks his paws and mane, thus making his toilette de combat. After group, and in a tone of defiance shouts, "Then knowest us not, then, that thou liest before us!

-Rise and fly! for we belong to such a tribe.

and I am Abdallah!" The lion, who has before

phized him in precisely the same terms, continues passing his enormous paws over his face to beautify himself and makes no reply to the challenge, nor to the epithets of "Jew!"-"Christian!"-"Infidel!" liberally bestowed on him, until the voices swell into a chorus, which makes him impatient. He then rises, lashes his sides with his tail, and marches straight towards the insulters. The timid are already in flight; the brave remain and await his attackwith muskets ready. He is beyond their reach and walks leisurely towards them. They now begin to retreat slowly in order, their faces turned to him, until they rejoin the horsemenwaiting at the foot of the mountain, who immediately commence galloping about, brandishing their muskets and yatagans, and shouting defiance. The lion, on seeing the horsemen on the plain, panses to reconnoitre. No cries nor insults move him. Nothing but powder will do that. It is heard at last, and then he changes his leisure march for a charge which scatters the little army. No one is ashamed of flying now; each tries to secure a favorable position from which to fire as the lion passes. The horsemen then advance. If, as is usual, the lion has clutched one of the retreating troop, it is only necessary for a horseman to approach within reasonable distance and discharge his gun, the lion at once quits his victim to charge his assailant. After a while, the lion, wounded and tired, cronches like a cut and awaits his end. This is a terrible moment. He is fired at, and receives their balls without moving, but should a horse gallop near enough to be reached in two or three bounds, either the rider or the horse is doomed, for the lion is upon him in an instant, and never quits his hold.
