The communication of "A Whig," which we have received through the hands of our neighbor of the Observer, contains many sentiments which we heartily endorse-they are not "too much tinctured with democracy" for us:but we decline publishing the article on account of certain personal allusions which the writer makes to a citizen of this county- To our readers we will state, that the communication in onestion is from the pen of an old line whig, who has come to the determination to support Mr Buchanan, giving his reasons at length and with much force of argument, for the course which he intends to pursue. He gives knownothingism "fits."
