is read with respect by all men. You refer to me as one "whose former political associations, at least while he co-operated with the Whig party, had warranted us in supposing him the advocate of conservative opinions and prudent councils." In this you do me but justice; and I assure you gentlemen, that I am not less the advocate of conservative principles and councils which I esteem pradent to-day, than when you and I stood to gether under the standard of that grand national patriotic party stern in its defence of the Constitution and losal to the whole country-the Whig party. Solong as it maintained its organization 1 hard its fortunes, prosperous or adverse, unflinchingly, confident in its principles, proud of its triumphs, undismayed by its defeats. But the great contest through which the country has just passed brought about a change in party alliances, and men hitherto sundered and antagonistical found themselves brought into new relations to each other. The Black Republican party was very formidable; its battalions hung in threatening masses along the whole North and Northwest. They were confronted by the Democratic party under the lead of Mr Buchaman, and by a considerable body of conservative men who gave their sup-ground of complaint," but they do require at least a protest on my part, if they are intended to make it appear that I favor a sectional organization of parties, or that I give counsels tion which, in my judgment, is eminently patriotic, and which will do whatever can be done by wise and just measures to strengthen and aphold the Government. Why should not the South unite in support of Mr Buchanan's Administration? Why should you or I, gentlemen, oppose it? What is there in the programme already given to the country to encourage or justify opposition to it?

I have said, what I do not hesitate to say again, that the Free-soil party is not scattered; that I believe it will rally for the next Presidential election with more formidable strength and more dangerous purposes than it has yet exhibited; and I have said, what I once more say, with, if possible, added emphasis, that in my judgment the administration standing as a bulwark for the defence of our rights, ought to be sustained by the "undivided South."

Far very far, from desiring to encourage geographical distinctions, yet I cannot overlook the fact that the South, as the weaker section cannot afford to divide its strength. It ought to present an unbroken front; for upon one question, and that the great overshadowing question of the country and the age, the civilized world is against us. She must cling to the Constitution as a sheet-anchor; if that drags we are at the mercy of winds and waves; if the Government passes into the hands of a reckless majority, and it is guided by the mere will of men who come to control it, that they who happen to be in power.
