I love him-how I love him Never mortal tongue can tell; The bright stars that shine above him, Never in his dreamings wove him Such a beatific spell, As my soul with fervor glowing, Is continually throwing (Like a silver streamlet flowing,) Over him I love so well!

And I know an angel-spirit Is around me hov'ring now; And the demon that doth fear it, As he speedily drew near it, Took his shadow from my brow: And a holy calm is o'er me, Since the angel being bore me Whither all was bright before me, And no earthly one may know!

And I see him near me ever, in the stilly death of night; And the bond, no hand can sever, Shall in lustre darken never To my soul-enraptured sight: But the light of beauty beaming, As a gem of fiery gleaming,-I alone can know it streaming On my inward vision bright.

As the gentle wavelet making Sweetest music on the shore, Or in sleeping or in waking, His dear voice new pleasures making, Shall enchant me evermore: For I love him, yes! I love him, As I love the skies above him-As I love the hopes that move him To the blissful days in store!
