Since assumed names have been revealed at Harper's Ferry; it is now remembered that about the same time a man was here, calling himself Smith, (corresponding in some things to the description given of Brown,) who was receiving numerous boxes from the East, through two of the forwarding houses at this place, and quite a number of letters through the post office. He also bought at the edge-tool factory picks and axes, and these, with the goods received by railroad, were forwarded southward by a wagon. He remained here nearly co, are taking measures for the erection of a monua week, going out but little to any other places than | ment to Senator Broderick the warehouses, post-office and factory. During the Sabbath that Fred. Douglas remained here, he too, remained closely at his lodgings, and it is retoo, remained closely at his lodgings, and it is remembered that he was visited by, and remained in conference during part of that day with, a couple of strangers, who were said to have their lodgings at a believe, this man Smith has at times either been staying himself or keeping some member of his
