A CHRISTMAS CAROL.

There sang twelve sparrows on the wall

When gloomed space the village doors

They heard a sound from mystic shores.

And sang their song for gladness' sake-

At even-fall, at even fall

Between the silent sycamores,

The birds of God were all awake.

Behind the inn, behind the inn,

Along the dark, across the les,

There was a wonder soon to be;

O, secret of the sens of Shem!

There lowed twelve oxen at the bin

They knew a sign no man could see.

Who told the beasts of Bethlehem?

At middle night, at middle night;

Behold the cradle of the King!

Between the sordid stable-bars.

There flew twelve angels, clothed in

With countless peers of kindred wing They called as distant bugles ring,

RAIL ROAD CHANGES.

That Go Into Effect To-Morrow Atlantic Coast Line: How it will Affect Goldsboro

For months our people have heard talk of the opening up of the Wilson, Fayetteville & Florence "short cut" of the Atlantic Coast Line and the transfer of the Fast Mail to that route North and South, whereby Goldsboro will lose this train-and Wilmington, too.

At length the time for the change has come and on to-morrow the new schedule will go into effect, and the fast mail will switch off at Wilson and go over the "short cut" to Florence and thence on southward. Many of our citizens have looked forward to this event as a detrimental happening for Goldsboro; but THE ARGUS looks at it altogether different, and believes that under the new schedule the change will result in positive benefit to our city and the people along the line of the W. & W. R. R.

In the first place, Goldsboro is strictly a market town-a centre of trade, both wholesale and retail--and as such it is the finest in the State.
