BESIDE THE BAY OF MONTEREY.

Beside the bay of Monterey,
When morn is on the mountains,
What joy to hear and know not fear
The cry of seaborn fountains!

Across the bay of Monterey
The sea fog, thinly drifting,
The land reveals or shore conceals,
Soft scenes, like magic, shifting.

Beside the bay of Monterey
How sweet to walk at even,
When softened dyes from sunset skies
Steal up the sapphire heaven!

Along the reach of rocky beach
Oh, joy it is to follow,
Where blooms the sea anemone
In every wave-worn hollow.

On giant rock that fronts the shock
The spray wet grasses glisten,
Where breaks the wave on cliff and cave
The flowers bend and listen.

I count the years by all my tears
And all life's stormy weather,
Stood by the bay of Monterey
We wandered, love, together.

I walk along the changing shore,
Oh, sad and strange it seems!
And you hear the billows roar,
You hear them but in dreams,
For you have slept now many a day
Upon the shore of Monterey.

—Sarah L. Stillwell in Overland Monthly.

THE WAY OUT.

Thursday's Philadelphia Times says the present deadlock in the Senate has recalled an occasion, during Mr. Ingham's occupancy of the chair, when the Senate found itself under its rules, absolutely unable either to proceed or to adjourn, and was compelled to sit for hours doing nothing. A motion to adjourn showed the absence of a quorum. Another motion to adjourn could not be entertained until some business had intervened and no business could be transacted without a quorum. And so the Senate was held there, a prisoner under its own rules.

Some such position as this is suggested by Mr. Sherman at the present time. The Senate, he says, cannot get a vote without a change of rules, but he also insists that it cannot and must not change the rules until after a vote has been had. Here we have the same old circle. The Senate can go round and round, but it will get nowhere till I have the courage to break through this artificial bondage and proceed directly to a vote.

We cannot see how the decision of a Democratic caucus is to solve the problem. What Mr. Sherman says about party responsibility is true enough, from his point of view, but a Democratic caucus cannot control the silver Republicans who are carrying on the present obstruction. No measure that will satisfy them can be or ought to be presented a party measure, and in any case it would not command their allegiance. If Mr. Sherman's own party were in power he might try to placate the filibusters, as he did before, but it is impossible for the Democrats to do so, and if they continue filibustering what would be gained by trying to pass something else?

As the situation is understood outside, there is no lack of votes to pass the pending bill. What is wanted is only the opportunity for the determination to make these votes tell. Another bill, adopted in caucus, would command some votes that would not be given to unconditional repeal, but it would lose others, perhaps including Mr. Sherman's own, and the only chance would be to shift to a party caucus, where it does not belong, the responsibility to make the Constitution yield in the whole body of the Senate. And still the obstruction would go on.

Mr. Sherman makes an ingenious party plea, but he evades the real issue. If we come to discuss party responsibility, he is likely to be reminded that it is his party that is responsible for the silver Senators. But we need dwell upon that fact only to point out that no Senator can escape his share of responsibility for the dignity and efficiency of the Senate. Its power to act is not and should not be made a party question. Only he is right in this, that the duty of leading, of initiating a remedy, does lie with the party majority, and that is where the Democratic Senators are at fault. It is they who must make the motion out of this mischievous deadlock and they ought to make it soon.

SEVERAL of our exchanges speak very highly of the performance of Pawnee Bill's Wild West show which will appear here October 28,

A FEARFUL HOLOCAUST.

Caused by the Collision of Passenger Trains.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Oct. 20.—The worst accident of the year occurred early this morning in the yards of the Chicago and Grand Trunk road close by the round house in this city, by which at least twenty-six persons lost their lives and doubly as many more were badly injured. A Raymond and Whitcomb special train of passengers from New York and Boston was returning from Chicago. The train was in charge of conductor Scott of this city and Engineer Wooley and took orders at this station to meet at Nichols, No. 9, the passenger express going west, due at this station at 1:35 o'clock this morning, but which was three hours late. The conductor or engineer or both of the Raymond special disobeyed orders and passed Nichols station and collided with the express coming west at the rate of about thirty miles an hour. The two engines were driven into each other and are a total wreck. The engineers and firemen, when they saw that a collision was inevitable, shut off steam, reversed the engines, put on brakes and all jumped and escaped without serious injury. The engineer of the passenger express was named Gilraushow and the conductor Burke. The conductor was badly hurt.

When the collision took place the second and third coaches on No. 9, the train going west, completely telescoped. As the third car crashed through the second, it swept the people in a mass to the front end of the latter car, in the vicinity of the stove, where most of the bodies were afterwards found. The cars immediately took fire and in an instant they were all in a blaze. The night yard men and neighbors in the vicinity were on the scene as soon as possible. One passenger escaped through the doorway. Others who escaped smashed out the windows and climbed through. Only three escaped from the left side and no more than six from the other side. All the rest of the occupants of the second coach perished. The bodies were burned so badly as to be almost unrecognizable. Nearly all had their heads, arms or legs burned off, and but few have been identified. The engine and baggage car of the special were badly wrecked, but the coaches being sleepers and the train moving slowly escaped serious injury.

The accident occurred a mile from the fire station, and before water could be turned on the cars they were all burned. No one on the Raymond special was injured. The Pacific express was made up of thirteen old coaches and four of them were completely burned, catching fire from the lamps in the cars.

Henry Canfield, one of the night clerks at the Chicago Grand Trunk office, heard the crash and immediately pulled the fire alarm box and then telephoned the engine house and informed them of the wreck. The firemen responded promptly but the wreck was over a mile away. The distance of the nearest hydrant from the wreck and the difficulty of driving the hose wagon delayed them and the fire had gained considerable headway when the line of hose was finally laid, it lacking 1,500 feet to reach the burning cars.

At 9 o'clock, twenty-six dead bodies had been taken out of the ruins of the wrecked cars and this is supposed to be the total number of victims. As fast as the charred stumps, valises, pocket books, watches, etc., were rescued from the debris they were turned over to the police officials. It is hoped that some of these grim relics will give a clue to the identity of some of those who met such a awful death. Many of the watches were of gold and one of the pocket books contained nearly $500. All the physicians in the city were aroused and were soon on the scene doing what they could to ease the terrible sufferings of the injured.

The people of the country have surely no reason to mistrust the wisdom of their decision in November last, by which they rejected White-Land Reid as a partisan unit for the high station in which he aspired.

It talk made laws, the Senate would have legislated by this time into the middle of the next century.

THE BEAUTEOUS BEGINNER.

She stands all sweet and tremulous
Before our ravished sight,
In dainty garb a vision fair
Of youth and beauty bright
A ribboned essay in her hand
She trembles holds, and reads
Its sage reflections as to what
Humanity most needs,

She is so fair, so sweet, so pure,
As we behold her there,
That who of us hears what she says,
Or who of us can care
If all her thoughts are all her own
Or taken from some book!
Or if her practical mamma
Has taught her how to cook?
—Somerville Journal.

THE SPIRIT OF FACTION.

The Atlanta Journal remarks very pertinently that it was the popular impression when Whitelaw Reid, chief editor of the New York Tribune, was nominated for the vice-presidency on the ticket with Harrison, that the Republicans had thereby worsted a cause already very bad. Odius as the Harrison administration had made itself by its policies, the nomination of Reid made the party which endorsed it still weaker before the people.

The course of the Tribune since the change of administration affords abundant proof of the correctness of the popular verdict. Had Reid been elected and been an influential member of the Harrison administration, or had he any power to control the action of the Senate, over which he would have presided, partisan spite and factious party recklessness, instead of statesmanship, would evidently have been his controlling impulse.

Ever since the meeting of Congress in extraordinary session, the Tribune has been twitting the Democrats about their delay in reforming the tariff. It has demanded more vociferously than the pronounced tariff reformer that the Democratic policy which it calls "free trade" should without delay be made to supplant the Republican policy of protection. It had, before the election of Cleveland and a Democratic congress, contended that the Democratic tariff policy would be ruinous to the business and industrial interests of the country. It had insisted since the election, that it was the prospect of tariff reform that was mostly influential in precipitating the prevailing "panic," business stagnation and the depression of the year. Yet it demands that what it alleges to be the cause of all this trouble and distress of the people, by its shadow only, shall be made substantial and permanent. Either this demonstrates that the Tribune has no faith in the truth of its own prophecies of disaster and ruin to follow the enactment of Democratic tariff reform, or that it is utterly reckless of such results if only its party can reap advantage thereby.

Now the Tribune is urging its party in Congress—those of them who have been aiding the Democrats in the struggle in the Senate to obtain a vote on the silver repeal bill—to cease their efforts in that direction, to withhold longer co-operation with the Democratic repealers, and to absent themselves, or refuse to vote, when they can thereby break a quorum; in other words, to wheel right around and give their assistance—passive at least—to the party in the Senate which they have heretofore been opposing! This, after the Tribune had been demanding as strongly as any other paper in the country the cessation of silver purchases and coinage by the government. It is obviously subordinating the prosperity of the business and industry of the country to partisan spleen or the hope of party advantage. It would rather endure evils which it has been depicting than that a Democratic administration should acquire the credit of having remedied them.

The people of the country have surely no reason to mistrust the wisdom of their decision in November last, by which they rejected White-Land Reid as a partisan unit for the high station in which he aspired.

It talk made laws, the Senate would have legislated by this time into the middle of the next century.

ACVIE TIMES FOR OUR SHIPS OF WAR.

Under this head the New York Sun writes interestingly of the movements of the ships of the American Navy, beginning with Guatemala, which is the latest of the countries in which revolutions, actual or threatened, have made sudden calls for the presence of our navy, the Alliance, which early in the season was hurried from San Francisco to Corinto on account of the political ferment in Nicaragua, then to Callao on account of the menaced troubles in Peru, then back to Corinto because Nicaraguan affairs were stormy again, has just now been ordered off to San Jose because of the revolt expected in Guatemala through the assumption by its President of the authority of a dictator. The Alliance is a wooden craft of 1,375 tons displacement, carrying in her main battery four 9-inch smooth-bore, an 8-inch muzz-loading rifle, and a 60 pounder. Her complement is 18 officers and 160 men. She is certainly not a very formidable craft as war ships go, yet she has been useful this summer in chasing the ubiquitous revolutionary symptoms up and down the Pacific coast, and no doubt she will be strong enough to look after American interests in Guatemala.

The busy fitting out of old vessels and new is gradually enabling Secretary Herbert to reinforce the most needy stations. We now have the San Francisco and Kearsarge to look after affairs in the West Indies, including Hayti, and to keep an eye on Greytown. We have the Chicago and Bennington at Malaga, or thereabout, ready in case of international trouble at Tangier or the further ill-treatment of American missionaries in Asia Minor. We have the Charleston at Rio Janeiro and the Newark and Yantic on their way thither, to watch the struggle between Peixoto and Mello, while the Newark will afterward be available with the Yantic to observe and chronicle troubles in Argentina. On the Asiatic station, the Concord, at Bangkok, is ready should fresh trouble break out between France and Siam, and the Baltimore will soon reinforce Admiral Irwin's squadron, to look after missionary riots in China. The Philadelphia and Adams are on guard at Honolulu, one of our most important stations, while the Yorktown is at Callao to protect American interests in Peru. Samoan affairs are, fortunately, quiet for the present, but perhaps when practicable a vessel may be spared for Apia, while during the coming winter the contingent for next year's sealing patrol can be made up.

Fortunately the Machias will soon be ready for foreign duty, and Castine a few months later; while other ships, including the Olympia, Montgomery, and Marblehead, are coming forward. Congress, however, ought to learn from the experience of the present year that numbers as well as power are required for the fleet, in order to answer the constant calls for foreign stations. Let us continue with vigor the work of building up the navy.

The Chinese need not go for six months yet if the Senate can reach a vote upon the McCrea bill amending the Geary Chinese registration act which passed the House Monday. The bill is based upon the assumption that the Chinese in this country were misled by the advice of the Six Companies and extends the time in which those who desire to remain in this country may register six months. The bill passed by a practically unanimous vote, the only negative votes being cast by representatives from the Pacific States. The measure seems to have been conceived in a spirit of fairness, and the large affirmative vote by which it passed the House indicates that it will furnish very small occasion for a display of anti-Chinese demagoguery.

A LITTLE LAND-LOCKED BAY.

I know a little land-locked bay,
For souls upon a stormy sea;
What light on all the hills around,
What song of birds in every tree,
No billows roll, no rocks do rend,
No wildly wrecking winds are there
But tiny ripples whisper "Peace!"
That little land-locked bay is Prayer,

CLOTURE IN THE SENATE.

Senator Voorhees Introduces the Closure Rule.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The Senate devoted four hours and a half to executive business and gave the seal of its approval to the appointment of Mr. Van Aelen as Ambassador to Rome, and Mr. Kilbreth as collector of customs at New York. During the brief period that the doors were open and the public admitted to the galleries, a few important events occurred. Chief among them was the introduction of a closure rule by Senator Voorhees—practically the same as that tattered by Senator Hill. It provides that when any bill or resolution which occupies the advantageous position of "unfinished business" has been debated for thirty days, any Senator may, at any time, make a motion fixing the time when the final vote shall be taken; that that motion shall be put immediately, and that during its pendency, or when the time fixed for the final vote arrives, no debate or amendment shall be permitted. The original motion, however, must have the affirmative vote of a majority of all the Senators entitled to vote. The resolutions were laid on the table and may come up for action to-morrow.

Then upon Senator Voorhees' motion the Senate went into executive session and remained there four hours and a half, the doors being re-opened at 3:10 o'clock.

The Silver Purchase repeal bill was then taken up and Senator Peffer offered an amendment to the substitute. It proposes free coinage of gold and silver under the provisions of the act of 1837, and revives that act.

Senator Peffer stated the points in which this amendment differed from that heretofore offered by him proposing free coinage and which has been voted down some time ago. This one now occupies the position of being the first that must be voted, on He then went on with the speech commenced by him last Friday, and continued in his remarks on Saturday, Monday and Thursday. One of Senator Peffer's picturesque and energetic expressions was in speaking of the course urged upon the Vice President: "Let no Caesar come into this body and there will be no need of a Brutus." Another was: "If we defeat the 'holy' or rather unholy alliance of the administration with Wall street this struggle will become memorable in history, for the Senate of the United States will have shown itself to be the last refuge of constitutional liberty. Having returned by name to Senators Voorhees and Gordon as Senators who had changed their action on the silver question without having changed their opinions, he was called to order for mentioning Senators by name, and was informed by the Vice President that the parliamentary expression was "the Junior Senator" or the "Junior Senator" from Indiana. Being so instructed he made the necessary change in phraseology.

After he had spoken for two hours, but without hearing the end of his discourse, Senator Peffer at 5 o'clock p. m. yielded to a motion to take a recess till 10 o'clock to-morrow morning, which was agreed to.

WE HOPE TO BE THERE.

O, the waiting has been weary, and the watching seems in vain,
For the rattle of the wagon and the whistle of the train!
But here's to health, and hope! that we won't be dead and dumb
To the ringing halloo! when the good times come!

O, the lane must have a turning that'll lead us to the light,
With a sun that's never clouded and a lot of stars at night;
So, here's to health, and hope! that we'll live to hear the drum
That'll beat in tune to "Dixie," when the good times come!

DEMOCRATIC RESPONSIBILITY.

The Baltimore Sun says truly that the Democratic party will be held responsible if the Senate should fail to meet the expectation and demands of the country by repealing unconditionally the Sherman act.

It cannot be otherwise since the country has placed a Democratic majority in the Senate.

The Sun says:

One year hence congressional contests will be going on all over the country. If, in the meantime, the Democratic majority in the Senate continues to be at the mercy of the minority, what will be the record on which the Democratic party must face its adversaries and ask a reversal of popular confidence? Plainly, if it cannot reform the currency laws in accordance with its pledges, neither will it be able to keep its promise to reform the tariff laws. If a small, but stubborn and aggressive group of silver Senators can reduce the Democratic majority to impotency in the Senate on the pending bill, nothing can hinder another group of high protectionist Senators from preventing any progress in the revision of the McKinley schedules. So, then, in the fall of 1894, if the Democratic administration is to be wounded in the house of its friends, as some Democratic Senators appear to be willing, it shall be, we may see a Republican appeal for restoration to power based solely upon the argument that with all the power which full control of the general government in all its branches can give, the Democratic Senate means to serve as an object lesson to enforce a Republican indictment of that kind, it has only to go right on as it is going to-day.

It will be said on behalf of the Democratic President that he did all he could to keep faith with the people, and that will be entirely true. If silver purchases are not stopped and by all American gold is drawn off into English coffers, leaving us with a currency composed exclusively of silver and paper based on silver, there will be a commercial convulsion compared with which the recent panic will look small indeed. The Democratic administration will be able to say, with truth, if such a catastrophe, that it did its utmost to avert it. The Democratic House will have the same clear title to be acquitted of blame. But the nation will not stop to discriminate in its condemnation if it has been brought to financial disaster by the failure of Democratic Senators to support their own administration, and co-operate with their fellow-Democrats in the House of Representatives.

For the practical purpose of political action, which is to bring about legislative changes and actually accomplish reforms, a great party in full possession of the government cannot be divided into sections and be tried by the people in detachments. It must necessarily be judged as a whole on its net performance. The jury of the whole people will try it by what it has tried to do at one end of the capitol and failed to do because: the other end there was lack of cohesion and concert of action.

The Democratic Senators from the South who have formed a league with Peffer, Stewart and the other Populists to prevent a vote on the great question now before the Senate are doing their utmost to damage the prospects of the party. We are aware that these filibustering Senators do not represent the Democratic party, but the party will be held to account for their present stubborn and stupid conduct. They will be a heavy load to carry in the next campaign.

WHAT CURED HIM?

Disturbed, disturbed, with pain oppressed,
No sleep, no rest, what dreadful pest
Such torments thus ensnared him?
Dyspepsia all night, all day,
It really seemed he had come to stay;
Pray, guess you, then, what cured him?
It was Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery,
That is the great cure for Head-ache, Sciatica, Dyspepsia, Kidney Disease, Liver Complaint and General Debility. An inactive Liver means poisoned blood; Kidney disorder means poisoned blood; Constipation means poisoned blood. The great antidote for impure blood is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Acting directly upon the affected organs, restores them to their normal condition. The "Discovery" is guaranteed to benefit or cure in all cases of disease for which it is recommended, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded.

YOUR HEART IS A MUSIC BOX.

Your heart is a music box, dearest,
With exquisite tunes at command,
Of melody, sweetest and clearest,
If tried by a delicate hand,
But its workmanship, love, is so fine,
At a single rude touch it would break,
Then, oh! be the magic key mine,
Its fairy like whispers to wake!
And there's one little tune it can play
That I fancy all others above—
You learned it of Cupid one day—
It begins and ends with "I love—
I love,"
—Robert F. Roden in Vogue.

ITALY AND HER ARMY.

Italy just now presents an instructive example to the world. The modern Italian kingdom, coming lately into the company of great powers, has followed the usual course of the parvenu in an effort to surpass all its neighbors in fashionable extravagance. She has got the biggest army and navy and the biggest debt, in proportion to population, of all the countries of the world.

And that is about all she has. Governmental extravagance and mismanagement, burdensome taxation and the withdrawal of so large a proportion of the real strength of the nation into military preparation, have brought about inevitably a very deplorable condition. Italy is poor, disorganized and discontented. But she has this big army and navy, that have cost and are costing so much, and she naturally wants to do something with them, War seems the only escape from ruin.

The older and greater powers, whose example has led lately into this extravagance, are now concerned to hold her in check. Germany is none too pacifically inclined, but Germany prefers to determine the question of war for herself, in her own time and way, and not to be dependent on this dangerous firebrand to the south of her. Austria's present military interests are united with Germany's, and the two are much occupied just now in suppressing the ambitions of their bellicose ally. In this they are, of course, supported by the pacific influence of England. It is generally agreed that the present menace to the peace of Europe is not from Germany or from France and Russia, but from Italy.

Yet Italy has no legitimate object of war-like enterprise just now. In a general European disturbance she would be allowed to do as much fighting as she pleased, but she would be among the last to be considered in the subsequent settlement. She merely wants to fight because she cannot afford to maintain her army any longer and has no other way to dispose of it. Whatever the result, her ambition to emulate her richer and stronger neighbors is to prove her ruin.
