

PRICES ARE FIXED BY THE SURPLUS

The size of the crop, be it wheat, cotton or what not, determines the price. If it be a staple wanted in many countries, it is the world's crop of it that fixes the price. When the world's demand has a focal point, as wheat has and cotton has, and most other crops have, then the dealers at that focal point adjust the demand to the known supply, and thus it comes about that Liverpool is said to fix the price of wheat, or cotton. Such dealers cannot determine a price regardless of a crop, for if they do, or if they misjudge, their punishment is assured. The price of a world's crop must be adjusted to a world's supply and a world's demand.

A world's demand for a surplus of a country very naturally fixes the price at home. It certainly operates to sustain the home price. If, for example, there should be no foreign demand for our surplus cotton or our surplus wheat or our surplus pig iron in years when we have such a surplus, prices at home would be sadly demoralized, and no one would be crying out against Liverpool or London or Hamburg because they want our products or fix our prices.

A Liverpool dealer in cotton first tries to ascertain what the crop of the year is likely to be; and when he becomes satisfied as to that, he then estimates the probable demand throughout the world, and then he determines what he is willing to pay. If a hundred cotton dealers in Liverpool go through this process of ascertaining the price, no two of them reaching the same result, then these men arrange themselves into two parties, the bulls and the bears, and the struggles of the two parties determine the price of this country's surplus cotton, and that in turn determines the price at home. The bears could not, however, turn bulls and put the price up regardless of the crop, nor vice versa, for the surplus crop itself would come tumbling in, or the reverse, and confound and upset their plans.

It is in a word the old law of supply and demand applied to a world-wide way, and no one can afford to disregard it. A crop must by its bulkiness or other weakness be strictly local, if its price is to be determined at home. The price of pumpkins is determined at home, but the price of apples is not, because apples can be and are shipped to other countries.

Republicans and Trusts.

We have predicted time and again in these columns that the Republican party in the next campaign would vie with the Democratic party in its denunciation of trusts. Had there been any doubt as to this, the Republican convention in Ohio would have removed it. "We commend the action of the Seventy-third Assembly of Ohio," says the platform, "in passing the stringent law on our statute books, prohibiting the organization of trusts, and we pronounce such unlawful combinations as inimicable to the interests of the people. We congratulate the people of the State upon the fact that the Republican Legislature enacted this law, and we demand its rigid enforcement."

This utterance is more significant as coming from Ohio, the State of President McKinley, and his right hand man, Mark Hanna. It is prophetic of the national platform of 1900. There is a popular prejudice against trusts, and politicians are not slow to take advantage of such an opportunity to play upon the passions of the people.

What will the Democrats do about this? The Republicans are evidently going to steal their thunder, if they can, and Democrats-like Mr. Altgeld are disposed to go a bow shot beyond and to declare that the only way to deal with trusts is for the government to confiscate them and operate them.

Mr. Altgeld says that the people will not be satisfied with a mere denunciation of trusts, but will demand some practical remedy for them, and that the only practical remedy is government ownership. Will the Democrats take Altgeld's view? That is the question and the greatest question, it seems to us, that the

BRADFIELD'S FEMALE REGULATOR

It makes sickly and weakly women strong and well again. Send for a free book about it. The Bradfield Regulator Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Democrats will have to consider between this time and the time of holding the convention in 1900, Mr. Altgeld has anticipated the action of the Republican party, and, being a shrewd politician, he has moved the party standard nearer than ever towards the realm of complete Socialism, and has challenged the party to follow his lead. What is the party going to do about it? We say that this is a question which the party cannot put aside and might as well meet it now as later. It is said that Mr. Altgeld is to be Mr. Bryan's manager.

DREYFUS CASE.

New Trial Ordered—Two Reasons Assigned For the Decision.

Paris, June 3.—The Court of Cassation has decided in favor of revision of the Dreyfus case as its submission to a new court martial to be held at Rennes.

The court in its decision gives two reasons for its judgment. The first is that the document containing the words "canaille de D" was not applicable to Dreyfus and was communicated to the court martial, and has been of a nature to influence its decision.

The second reason is that the bordereau was written upon paper identical with that used in authentic letters written by Esterhazy, and that the bordereau was also identical in handwriting with Esterhazy's.

The new court martial will pass upon the following question: "Is the accused guilty of having in 1894 maintained relations with a foreign power of a nature to permit it to engage in or promote hostilities against France?"

After the decision was announced the court room was cleared of public spectators. M. Cabines then announced to the court that his client, ex Major Esterhazy, acknowledged his authorship of the bordereau, and the court is now considering whether or not this constitutes another new fact to be included in its decision.

Mme. Dreyfus has been authorized to inform her husband of the decision of the court. When this authorization was conveyed to her she replied with deep feeling that she welcomed the hour of justice, of which she had never despaired, and awaited with absolute confidence the verdict of future judges in her husband's case.
