MR. PULTZER'S SCHOOL.

Mr. Pultzer announces that the school of journalism which he proposes to endow and to organize through Columbia University, is to be postponed until after his death occurs. He says he has already paid over to the university a million dollars, and a second million or more will be paid to the university when Mr. Pultzer dies—an event, let us hope that will be long postponed.

A school of journalism should be started with deliberation and long preparation. It is practically an untried scheme. Cornell did conduct a school in which newspaper men were trained out of order, but it never became popular or useful.

The rich, schools cannot make newspaper men out of not-newspaper men. Culture and literary skill do not "newspaper" men make. They are handy things in the hands of a newspaper man, but they are at the most incidental.

A newspaper man must have a nose for news, and, in order to succeed, a school of journalism must be able to put a nose for news on a man who has a common everyday non-newspaper nose. The substitution of nose is not an easy task, and no school has ever been able to accomplish it. None perhaps ever will.

A nose for news enables a man to see a piece of news as soon as it comes to him, to weigh it, and to give it proper expression. It is this very knowledge that differentiates a newspaper man from all other men. A literary man or a man of many tongues and vast scientific acquirements is not a newspaper man unless he also has a nose for news. If Mr. Pultzer's school could be confined to those who are born with a nose for news all would go well, but it is difficult to see how that line could be drawn in a school open to all comers. It is equally difficult to see how an examining board could separate the sheep from the goats in the admission stage. In fact and in short a school of journalism is exceedingly tentative and immensely conjectural.

WINTER IN NEW YORK.

The New York papers say this has been and emphatically been an ear-muff winter. "The average city man," says the Tribune, "detects ear-laps as much as he does those old-fashioned wristers worn by his great-grandfather, and when he puts them on, making of himself a strange-looking creature, it is indeed cold." The street vendors of ear muffs have had a thriving trade in them this winter in New York.

Every storm and cold wave has this season focalized itself in New York, spilling there nearly all the snow it held. All told the clouds have sited in and through New York—the subway only excepted—46 inches of snow, and if ear muffs should not be worn in 46 inches of snow, here indeed should they be worn?

The Tribune need not go out of its way to declare ear muffs "the most hideous protection ever designed to shelter man's members from the cold."

Ear muffs are not at all hideous whether or wherever they are used. They are needed in all winters in Siberia, and this winter they are needed in New York. The snow belt has shifted from Northern New York to Manhattan Island, and the ear muffs have shifted accordingly. The Tribune should not cry out against the weather and the laws of trade. It should accept things as they come, even if they come in the form of blizzards and ear muffs.

AS TO STATE RIGHTS.

The Montgomery Advertiser is entertained and amused at the spectacle frequently presented by Republican statesmen advocating State rights, a doctrine which many of them have looked upon in the past as being the limit of villainy. It cites the case of Senator Spooner, who was a Union soldier and is a typical Republican, protesting against the provision in the new statehood bills prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in the proposed new States. In a recent speech the Wisconsin Senator declared that Congress had no right to grant privileges of one class and not of another, and that the Federal government is without the right to discriminate against or in favor of any class of offenses. "If Congress could control the sale of liquor it could also control the offense of burglary," is the way he argued.

GOLD GOING OUT.

In the last fiscal year we exported gold to the value of thirty-six million dollars beyond all our imports of the precious metal, but in that year we produced from the earth eighty million dollars worth of gold, so that at the end of the year we had over forty million dollars worth more of gold than we had on the opening day of the year.

In the present fiscal year the work of the previous year will no doubt be duplicated. Already we have sent away $15,000,000 more than we have received. One steamer last week took to Paris nine million dollars, all well insured.

There is nothing of moment in the current shipments. We are heavy producers of gold. Colorado, South Dakota and Alaska turn in to us great amounts every year, and naturally we stand ready to supply those countries that need gold and produce none. France is such a country.

We may send away before June 30, forty, or even fifty millions of gold, but this means no more than that some country wants gold which we can more readily spare than our bonds or stock. We are settling bills with gold instead of securities. We have become a forerunner nation, and we have gold both to burn in the arts and to ship to other countries. We are, in fact, one of the richest countries of this world—perhaps the richest the world has ever known.

MR. METCALFE AND THE TRUST.

James Metcalfe, the editor and dramatic critic of Life, has been shut out of all the theatres controlled by the theatrical syndicate, and the battle that has arisen between him and the trust is a battle for the freedom of the press in which all are interested.

Mr. Metcalfe will no doubt test his right to occupy a seat he had paid for, and the decision of the court will be awaited with interest. The trust is advised by its lawyers that it can sell a ticket calling for admission, and yet refuse the bearer from gaining entrance to the theatre in question. This question is to be fought out in the courts. Mr. Metcalfe will be fighting the battle of the general public when he contends that a ticket openly purchased should be honored at the door.

The broader question relates to the right of criticism in general. If the trust be given power to decide who shall criticize the plays presented by them we will have reverted to Russian methods and Russian backwardness. The whole question seems to be—is this Russia or America?

Mr. Metcalfe will not abate or compromise his claim to admission whenever or however he buys a ticket, and when his case is decided we will all know how much power the trust has over theatrical criticism in this alleged land of the free.

WARD LIQUOR BILL.

IT PASSES THE SENATE AFTER STORMY DEBATE.

Prolonged and Impassioned Discussion. Vote Was 25 to 16.

Raleigh News and Observer.

The Senate yesterday plunged into a stormy debate on the Ward whiskey bill, and many an argument was shattered on the rocks of facts, and several stately speeches, which could not survive the shock of contact with the wild oratorical elements were completely wrecked, hardly a sentence from the rhetorical structures remaining unharmed after the storm had subsided, and quiet had been restored.

In the course of the lengthy discussion, which consumed nearly four hours, there were personalities galore, and the trend of remarks changed constantly from heights sentimental, to depths sensational, and from the calm, dispassionate talk, to an intemperate and almost infuriated speech. The bill was argued upon its merits, from a religious standpoint, as it affects the Democratic party, and from a basis of equity and justice. It was turned upside and down, and inside and out, every provision of it praised and censured.

Many phases of the debate were precipitated by the speech of Mr. Fleming, of Pitt, in advocating his substitute bill. He charged that praiseworthy motives had not inspired the Ward bill, and that its advocates did not possess manhood and courage sufficient to frame a bill aiming directly at the objects they desired to strike. These statements were vehemently objected to and repudiated by several Senators. Later in the day Mr. Fleming withdrew his bill.

Several amendments were offered, one of which, changing the date of the act making it effective after January 1st, 1906, was accepted by Mr. Ward.

When the vote was taken on the bill on its second reading, twenty-five Senators voted in favor of it, and sixteen against it. Mr. Gilliam objected to its being read a third time, and Mr. Scales made a motion to set aside the rules and put the bill on its immediate passage, but the motion failed, requiring a two-thirds vote, and the bill was placed on the calendar.
