OHIO A DOUBTFUL STATE.

Scarcely had Secretary of War Taft landed at Hampton Roads before he began to discuss the Ohio election, and particularly Boss Cox of Cincinnati. "A machine," he said, "entrenched in power," as is the Ohio machine, can only be made to give up through the earnest attention and work of young men entering politics with the enthusiastic and unselfish desire to make it better and willing to devote all time possible not needed in their daily vocation to the organization of political clubs."

Here we have a declaration that Mr. Taft proposes to organize a machine of his own to take the place of the repudiated Cox-Dick machine, which was first organized by Mark Hanna. Mr. Taft is an untiring worker, but he has certainly planned a good deal of work when he proposes to become Ohio's choice for President, and to put his state behind him. He will encounter no little opposition, and the outcome is by no means free from doubt. Mr. Taft will certainly not be able to say that Ohio speaks wholly by and through him, and that he carries that state in his capacious trousers pockets.

The truth is, no one can be very sure of Ohio, which has long had a reputation for turning a corner abruptly. In 1877 it elected a democratic governor by 22,250 plurality. In 1882 the democrats elected a secretary of state by a plurality of 19,115. In 1883 they elected a governor by a plurality of 12,529. In 1889 another democratic governor was elected, this time by a plurality of 10,872. In 1892 one democratic elector was chosen, and in 1905 John M. Pattison, a democrat, becomes governor by a plurality exceeding 40,000.

Ohio, in other words, is not a hide-bound, rock-ribbed republican state, and the Taft programme will serve to render its political position in the next few years decidedly uncertain.

As things look at present, Mr. Taft may be pitted, in 1908, against Governor-elect Pattison, and the race will be one of the most doubtful in American politics. So Ohio affairs look at present. They may look differently later on.

MONEY AND THE RUSSIAN CRISIS.

The mind rapidly goes back to Father Gapon and his heroic efforts made in the snows of last January in St Petersberg, and ever since that movement Russia has been full of deep unrest and discontent. The students organized strikes, insurgent sailors in the Black Sea seized warships, workmen in Odessa and in the Caucasus met in revolt, and provincial congresses discussed revolution. All demanded governmental reforem All demanded constitutional rule. All were parts of one whole, and all culminated in the political strike inaugurated by all branches of industry last week. The students and the professions and the nobles joined it. It was peaceful as a rule, and general. Its results are known now of all men—the autocracy simply surrendered.

While the grand ducal coterie has been in a state of siege a full year, yet it and its Cossacks would perhaps have held on if the country had not through the incapacity of the bureaucracy become practically bankrupt. The entire concern was bnnkrupt, both in purse and in public esteem. The war left it in that condition. It needed $300,000,000 in order to get back to a peace footing. The strikers drove the men who could procure the money away, and the autocracy either had to conciliate the people the strikers—or do without the money needed to keep things going.

When the truth becomes known it may appear that the need of money by the autocracy at this juncture had no little to do with the remarkable change that has come to Russia. The pending loan is absolutely needed; it could not be had while popular agitation was maintained, and the autocracy decided therefore to quit, and this brought Count Sergius de Witte and the constitutionalists into power.

PRIMARIES IN NEW YORK

The amazing run of William Travers Jerome and the wholesale overthrow of bosses have awakened even New York to a new and quick appreciation of the primary system. Heretofore bosses have made nominations through packed and subservient conventions, but the time has come when there is a general demand for a change. The people seem to think they have some rights in the matter of making nominations.

The New York Herald is pushing the new movement. "The one way," it says, "to free the nominations form vicious control by professional party leaders is to have nominations made by direct vote by the people at the primaries." This is true doctrine, and the backward boss-ruled State of New York is beginnig to see it. Lieut. Gov. Timothy L. Woodruff is heading the movement in the legislature, and in the legislature which meets in January he proposes to push a bill through that will cover the subject comprehensively.

The bosses, including Senator Platt, will oppose it, but the public demand for it has at length become so insistent it may be passed. The legislature is strongly Republican but that matters little, for the bosses of both parties are opposed to direct nominations by the people.

If, however, New York adopts, primaries the battle in the country is as good as won, for even New Jersey and Pennsylvania would then fall into line. The people of the west and south have already come into their own. It is the effete east that lags in the ruts of boss and clique rule.

GERMANY AND THE UNITED STATES.

When the Senate meets next month the President will lay before it a trade treaty recently negotiated between Germany and this country. Both countries seem to have come to the conclusion that tariff wars can be carried too far and too freely.

But the proposed treaty will be fought strenuously by the men who are looting the country under the Dingley act. The duty on beet sugar will no doubt be slated in the treaty for reduction, for that is a product of Germany. The American beet sugar interest is well organized, and it will fight the proposition. Other special interests will join in the fight and the proposed treaty will not be put through the Senate easily or speedily. It means a fight with the standpatters. Uless the new treaty is ratified by March 1 the new Germany treaty will go into effect. We sell $100,000,000 more to German than Germany sells to us, and unless we ratify the pending preferential treaty our trade will be seriously hurt. Germany is an excellent customer.

The German ambassador, Baron Speck von Sternburg, is now in Washington, and he will urge before this government the advisability of a reciprocity treaty which will bring to both the favored treatment in tariff rates. Standpattism is up against the proposed German treaty. It must accept it, or be prepared to see heavy duties applied to our meats, cereals and other products, including manufactured goods. Germany has modified her tariff from time to time, and she sees no reason why she should not do so again, always provided this country will meet her half way. The standpatters are in a peck of trouble.

No Secret About It.
