What Shall we do with our Daughter? This question is asked by a well-known lady lecturer. Well, we can do a great many things with them; one thing, we must take good care of their health, and not let them run down and become feeble. For the genuine ailments, which may be summed up in one word, debility, we have a sovereign remedy in Brown's Iron Bitters, which has done much good. Miss Mary Greenfield, of Galatia, Ill., writes, "Brown's Iron Bitters cured me of nervousness, indigestion and general poor health." Let the other young ladies take the hint. "What I told my Wife," is the title of a new book. It is almost needless to say that it is fiction. Pains in the back are frequently caused by a sudden wrenching of the spine, and the use of applications of Salivation Oil will give permanent relief. Price twenty-five cents. For sale by all druggists.

A CZAR'S WINTER PALACE. A Building Which Shelters 7000 People. The palaces and churches of Russia make the rest of Europe seem very poor; still, I do not think the winter palace in very good taste, writes a correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer. It is a vast quadrangle of courts, halls, throne rooms and galleries, all jumbled together, with no especial plan (save in its interior), and so immense that they could build a narrow gauge railroad for eight-sevens. It gives constant shelter to some 7,000 people, yet you may pass through the whole of it and not see one. It was not its splendor which interested me the most. We had wandered for hours, until utterly wearied with the grandeur, and glitter of its splendor, when we were ushered into a small apartment, so poor and simple in its appointments that I thought it, with its carpet and wooden table, a guard room. On the table lay a few maps, across the bed an army cloak and simple "cocked hat;" no curtain at the window, no chair save a camp stool. On one table lay folded a pocket handkerchief, and bending down I saw, now faded and nearly gone, the "Nicholas." In an instant all our weariness had vanished and inside most intense took its place, for I knew I was in the room where the great Emperor's heart had broken, and where, though he ruled all Russia, he died utterly alone. They tell the story of his death in St. Petersburg as the world does not know it. Broken-hearted over the results of the Crimea and unwilling to live if he must lose the sight of his grandeur he summoned to him an obscure physician and ordered him to give the Czar of Russia a potion that would "end life quickly and painlessly." The man, astounded and frightened, refused utterly, but was told that after such a request from such a source he must obey or lose his own life. That settled it. He was paid heavily and sent out of the kingdom. The next morning the great Czar Nicholas lay upon his camp bed in his army cloak dead. And following noon after the physician was found murdered in his bed in Heidelberg. They say the howling of the wolves from across the Nava could be distinctly heard the night Nicholas died. How the comic and tragic tread close upon each other in this life. We were taken from Nicholas's room to that of the late Empress. She had been in Italy for several winters, battling with that enemy of her family, consumption, weary with her banishment, she begged to go home, and the Czar was told that if there was a room especially prepared and kept at the same temperature constantly she might live for some years even in Russia. The room was prepared, and she came home only to suffer most horribly, and begged constantly to die. Finally his Majesty asked the physician how long she would live if the windows were opened and the cold let in. "Twenty minutes," was the reply. "Then open the windows," and as they did so all left the room, and she, Empress so many millions, was left to cross the dark waters alone. Not even her daughter stayed to hold her hand. These are some of the shadows of the winter palace.

ALL SORTS OF TRICKS. How the Mormons Hope to Save Their Criminal Accomplishes. SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, Dec. 30.--The church organ, the News, said last evening: "McMurrin has been taken by a relative and is in a dangerous condition." The Mormon Herald said the same thing. Later it appeared that McMurrin had fled or been taken away by the church people because of the fear that church officials will become involved in the conspiracy to kill United States Deputy Marshal Collins. McMurrin was subpoenaed to appear in court yesterday to answer the charge of shooting Collins, but a Mormon physician's certificate was produced stating that he was too ill to do so. A Mormon physician's certificate was also produced yesterday that Hampton, indicted for importing women to seduce Genies, was in such a state of health that imprisonment would kill him. Sentence upon him was therefore temporarily deferred. The Mormons are contesting every point in defense of their religionists, and will evidently make a desperate legal fight on their behalf.

AN OREGON WILD MAN. A Missing Hunter Found in the Mountains Naked and Covered with Hair. PORTLAND, ORE., Dec. 30.--Great excitement prevails at the town of Lebanon, Linn county, Oregon, over the well-authenticated report that a veritable wild man has been discovered in that region. About four years ago a man named John McEntire, of Lebanon, while out hunting in the Cascade mountains, disappeared mysteriously and no definite trace of him has ever been found. A few days ago James Fitzgerald and others while hunting in the Cascades, discovered a man resembling the long-lost McEntire, entirely destitute of clothing. He had grown as hairy as a grizzly, and was perfectly wild. He was eating the raw flesh of a deer when he was first seen, and the hunters approached within a few yards before he saw them, when he fled. A large party is now being organized at Lebanon to search for and capture, if possible, this wild man. Several other citizens assert that they have also recently seen the strange looking man.

Abnormal Animals. The expedition undertaken by Mr. Caldwell (who was aided in his equipment by funds from the Government Grant Committee of the Royal Society) is perhaps the most interesting, because the animals which he has gone to study are of large size and already more or less familiar. The Ornithorhynchus and the Echidna are hairy quadrupeds (mammals) peculiar to Australia, which differ from all other hairy quadrupeds in having, like birds, but a single aperture to the exterior for the intestine and the urogenital canal, and in having the skeleton of the shoulder girdle and some other features of structure are similar to those of reptiles. Like those of reptiles, their bodies are comparatively cold, instead of being kept in a definite "blood heat" (100 degrees Fahr.) as are those of all other mammals. It had often been reported, and some kind of evidence had been given to support the statement, that these strange beasts lay their eggs like birds and reptiles. Instead of retaining the egg-like structure within the body and allowing it to develop to a certain condition of maturity as do all other hairy quadrupeds. One of Mr. Caldwell's objects was definitely to ascertain whether these animals lay eggs or not, and of more importance than that, to examine minutely the whole history of the growth in the egg, and to compare it on the one hand with the corresponding development of birds and reptiles, on the other with that of ordinary hairy quadrupeds or mammals. Mr. Caldwell has found out all about these animals and collected them in quantities. The Echidna lays a single egg, which she then carries about her in a pouch formed by a fold of skin on the ventral surface of the body, similar to the kangaroo's pouch. The duck-mole, on the other hand, lays two eggs at a time and does not carry them about, but deposits them in her nest, an underground burrow like that of the mole. Naturalists are awaiting with great interest Mr. Caldwell's account of what goes on inside these eggs while the young one is growing there; that is to say, an account of the differences and resemblances between the structures which gradually arise in these mammal's eggs and those which are familiar to us as occurring in the case of the common fowl. --E. Ray Lankester, in Popular Science Monthly for September.

Good Results in Every Case. D. A. Bradford, wholesale paper dealer of Chattanooga, Tenn., writes that he was seriously afflicted with a severe cold that settled on his lungs, had tried many remedies without benefit. Being induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, did so and was entirely cured by the use of a few bottles. Since which time he has used it in his family for all Coughs and Colds with best results. This is the experience of thousands who have been saved by this Wonderful Discovery. Trial Bottles free at Kirby & Robinson's Drug Store, MESSENGER BUILDING, Goldsboro, N. C. An old rhymer says paralysis is caused by canned goods. It is also certain that some of it comes through bottled goods. --Picaune. Having experienced marked relief from nasal catarrh and hoarseness by the use of Ely's Cream Balm, I recommend it to singers, clergymen and others afflicted. --Louis E. Phillips, 428 N. Y. Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C. ELY'S Cream Balm received Myhead is now liquifying. Cream Balm is simply dynamite for Catarrh in the head. Its application is magical. --Thomas Lander, Augusta, Ga. Svedeen is a good cattle country, because there the animal never strays, the cattlemen always find their Stockholm. --Folio A Fortunate Disciple of Franklin in Boston. A Boston job printer, Mr. M. B. Nelson, No. 26 Merrimac St., held one fifth of Ticket No. 44,719 in the November Drawing of the Louisiana State Lottery, which drew $75,000, costing him $1. He is single, about 22 years of age, will enable him to extend his business. He is a steady, industrious young man, and will make good use of his wealth. --Boston (Mass.) Commercial and Shipping List, Nov. 25. He can print his own luck.
