INTERESTING HISTORY.

We surrender much of our space this morning to a brief review of the dark days of 1861-the organization of auguration of Jefferson Davis as its the same merely as a matter of interesting history, worthy to be kept and preserved, and not in any boastfulness or spirit of disloyalty.

The days of 1861 proved the inaug uration of a dark period for the South, these memories will grow until they be even more precious and of deeper interest to our children.

That unfortunate and terrible struggle ended twenty-five years ago. The South was subjugated, but not crushed in manhood nor subdued in spirit. To day her people are as loyal to the Union as are the people of any other of Greeks settled there as compared State. The South would not to day change the result if it could, but her ties admitthis. ### THE OLEOMARGARINE HUI BUG.

Notwithstanding the report of the Judiciary Committee, the Committee on Agriculture in the House continue to report bills for the suppression of the oleomargarine humbug, so much detested by farmers and dairymen. Col. Green was chairman of the subcommittee which considered framed the measure reported by Chairman Hatch last Friday. The measure is of much importance in some quarters, and may become so in this section if the oleomargarine business is permitted to expand. It is on this acan agricultural community.
