OUR FLAG UPON THE SEA.

A Sorry Show of Warfare at Pensacola.

[From the New York Sun.] Our navy during the last five weeks has been making a melancholy exhibition of itself at Key West and Pensacola.

Our navy during the last five weeks has been making a melancholy exhibition of itself at Key West and Pensacola. No doubt the practice drills at these points have been needed. As Secretary Whitney's official order to Admiral Joutet said, in directing the exercises: "Although the ships and guns of your squadron are not of modern construction, the principles governing naval warfare may be clearly illustrated by the vessels thus brought together, and the importance of exercising in squadron cannot be overestimated."

The North Atlantic squadron has indulged in steam tactics, without having a single vessel of even respectable speed, according to the modern standard. It has gone through the motions of preparing for action without having one modern line-of-battle ship in its collections of wooden craft. It has gone through elaborate target practice with guns the largest of which would be only popguns compared with the ordnance habitually carried on the vessels of second-rate powers. It has had torpedo drill without a single self-moving torpedo and had a night attack by a torpedo flotilla which did not contain a single torpedo boat proper.

Do you have regular hours for work or do you wait for an inspiration? "I never wait for an inspiration, and am not aware of having been visited by any. I generally get a walk in the morning and write in the afternoon and evening. But I keep no strict rule in such matters."

The exhibition on the Florida coast shows, in short, that the navy has been allowed to go down to a very low mark, so far as its ships, its guns, its projectiles, and its other appliances for war are concerned.

A GRAND JURY AND BOYCOTTERS.

NEW YORK, April 30.—The grand jury of the Court of General Sessions was discharged to-day, but not until Foreman Brown had handed to Recorder Smythe a presentment concerning boycotting. The presentment severely condemns Police-Justice Weld, who, when a number of boy-cotters were arrested and brought before him for annoying Cavanagh, Sandford & Co., tailors, promptly discharged them on the ground that they had not violated the law.

spiraey against the people. The grand jury regrets to reflect upon any officer of justice, and notwithstanding the opinion of Justice Wild, through examination convinced them that this so-called boycott is an accused exotic, and they urge that every effort of our legislature, bench and bar, the press of the land, and of every American citizen be taken to aid in exterminating this hydra-headed monster, dragging its loathsome length along this continent, sucking the very life-blood from our trade and commerce, equally baneful to employers and employed.

Julian Hawthorne's Ideas.

Mr. Julian Hawthorne, the novelist, was recently interviewed by a Chicago Daily News reporter. The conversation turned upon the estimation placed by Europeans on American works of fiction, and the question was asked: "Do you think the American novel is growing in popularity abroad, and what are its distinctive features thought to be by foreigners?"

"The American novel is certainly growing in popularity abroad, especially in England, as will be seen by the frequent English reprints of our better novels. The reason for this is that there are at present so few tolerable novelists in England. The English novel has been written to death, and as even novel-readers must have occasional novelty, they turn to our books with relief. The distinctive features of our work probably appear to them to be new situations, social conditions, and types of character and a certain minute accuracy of treatment from the literary point of view.

"I think it has nothing to do with the progress of the time. It only indicates that our novelists make less use of their imagination than any other class of our community. Perhaps the recognition they receive is too faint to stimulate them. The difficulty is certainly not on the side of any deficiency of stirring times. Timidity and lack of self-confidence have more to do with it. Our writers consider their audience too much; no audience that they can reach is worth considering as a literary tribunal. Inspiration is depreciated, as if it must be either a trite and hackneyed il-lure. A masculine poet or novelist, much needed, and it might be well, at this stage of our literary history, to make it a penal offense for any woman to write a story."

"Do modern novelists make their men and women do nothing but sit still and talk because there is nothing else for them to do?" "No, the present time," said the Secretary.

"What are your methods of working? Do you depend principally upon your observations or on your imagination?" "Observation is always of assistance in imaginative work if it can be sufficiently emancipated from individual instances. On the other hand, nothing more a fictitious character so as to make it conform too closely to any real model. The requirements of the story must be allowed to mold and adapt it or the story will be ruined."

A story is going the rounds about the unique Mr. Henry Prouse Cooper, the tailor, who has figured somewhat in New York courts in times past. One day, just after Mr. Cooper had been arrested at the instance of somebody who didn't like the way that Mr. Cooper spent his own money, a young man who happened to be running an Ishmaelite sort of paper printed an editorial paragraph pitching into Mr. Cooper's writing for little less than an archangel. Mr. Cooper saw this paragraph in due time, and made a call upon the young man to render thanks. "I believe you have an account with me," said Mr. Cooper before he left. "I asked my bookkeeper for it before I came down to-day, and here it is, all recited, my friend. Take it, and be token of my appreciation; your bill is all wiped out."

Some Street-Car Nuisances.

Men who have been eating onions. Men who smoke bad cigars on the front platform. Men who chew and expectorate in the cars. Peddlers who fill the cars with their wares and smell badly.

Men who crowd the platform so that people are squeezed nearly to death in getting on or off the cars. Men who pick their teeth in public. Men who clean their finger-nails in public. Juveniles who insist on sky-larking. Boys who eat pean-uts. The small boy who, on muddy days, insists on kneeling on the seats.

The stout lady who, when the car lurches, subsides in one's lap. The shrill-voiced female. The mother of six who brings the whole six along. The lady who will mistake the bell-rope for the strap. The woman who at every street corner asks where she is to get out. The gum-eating girl. The woman who after stopping the car only take five minutes to kiss and say good-by.

Dodging Senators.

There is a good story going the rounds about one of the Cabinet officers. He is sorely pressed and oppressed by office-seekers and their backers, one Senator in particular being so persistent as to make him a terror to the Secretary. The other day an old friend dropped in to the department to pay his respects and to chat about the days when gray hairs were a myth and trouble an unknown quantity to the two boys; he wound up some specially stirring reminiscences with: "And what do you do with yourself nowadays, old fellow?"

"Well, I work like a slave-driver all day, and dodge Senator ---; then I dine, and dodge Senator ---; then I come back and work here to escape Senator ---; then I go to my room, read a little to compose my mind, say my prayers, look under the bed for Sena-tors, and if he isn't there go to sleep and dream he has button-holed me to talk about that little appointment he wants."—Cor. Chicago Tribune.

Start for the Train or Boat

In good season, and don't forget to take with you Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which will revive and benefit you when fatigued; will nullify the hurtful effects of water contaminated with zinc from the ice cooler, or stagnant and brackish; relieves indigestion produced by meals of uncertain wholesomeness, hastily bolted at odd times in railway stations, and protect you from the influence of vitiated or malarious air and thorough draughts. To the traveling public, this admirable safeguard and specific is tendered in a convenient and pleasant form. An ordinary ship's medicine chest contains no such comprehensive and reliable remedy, a fact well understood by mariners. The commercial traveler, tourist, emigrant, miner and western pioneer, all appreciate the value of the Bitters. It cures dyspepsia, costiveness, liver complaint, malarial disorders, inactivity of the kidneys, and is a fine nerve tonic.
