My Friends Remember and Take Notice!

This is the truth! I do not wish to deceive you in any way by saying this, that and the other, to induce you to my store, but am giving you whom some facts, of which I will convince you when you come to see me.
Since my return home the rush has been immense, from the time that I open my doors until I close them. In my store I am questioned every day by my customers in this way: "Why, sir, Mr. Edwards, how is it you appear to be busy all the time; it does not look like the hard times that I hear so many complain of, who seem in reality to be idle?" My answer to all such enquirers is, that I buy all my goods for Cash, no rent to pay, and have no fear of Northern merchants reflecting on me by saying that I am selling my goods too cheap. "The goods are mine, belong to me, I can give them away if I feel so disposed, and it kinder strikes my mind that before the end of the next thirty days it will be so close to the "give away" there will be (as the saying is) no fun in it."
Do not believe in gassing and blowing. I do not want to make you believe the "moon is made of green cheese," but to all, I mean all I say---facts without fiction."
Any country merchant wishing to buy goods can save 25 per cent. and save going North by purchasing their goods of me, as I have the facilities for furnishing you at remarkably low prices. All responsible parties wishing to buy goods on time until next fall, I will sell to them, at figures to suit, of my extensive stock of Dry Goods, Clothing, Notions, &c. Also Meat, Flour, Sugar, Coffee, Tobacco, and in fact, Farmers Supplies.

I desire to call the attention of my customers to this fact, those wishing to buy extensively will please make it convenient to come during the week, as I can wait on them, perhaps to their advantage, avoiding the rush of Saturdays.
Now to you, in conclusion, I will say that the most important and interesting point to you is not to make a mistake in finding my house. For your own benefit and accommodation I have had placed right in front of my door a sign, on which is painted in large, plain letters,

JOSEPH EDWARDS!

The Champion of Low Prices!

And if you will come in there you are safe, and will go away contented and perfectly satisfied. I am bound to be the CHEAPEST MAN in Goldsboro. I come here the CHEAPEST MAN. I have been the CHEAPEST MAN, I am now the CHEAPEST MAN, and prefer and am determined to continue to be the CHEAPEST MAN if I should sell everything for one cent a yard as I did when I commenced business among you. Respectfully,

How a Wise Man Built His House.

Many of our readers will find their own experience reflected in the following paragraph taken from the last number of the Central Law Journal, where it is used to illustrate a subject, but the house builder's experience in seeking the advice of his neighbors found it different, and was probably wise in rejecting all their suggestions, and following the plans his own judgment dictated. The moral here conveyed does not end with locating of a house site or the erection of the building. It will be generally found best to follow one's own impressions and taste rather than to defer to others.

"Couldn't you get a place on the paper, Mr. Gault?" "There are no vacancies except on the editorial staff, and I can't write editorials. I never could compose two consecutive sentences in my life." "Well, but couldn't you write the book reviews?" "No. I don't know anything about books; I'm no reader." "Well, you might read proof." "Can't read aloud. Asthma, you know. Couldn't read about ten minutes." "Well, I'll tell you. Great scheme; just the thing for you. Lecture." Brooklyn Eagle.

STEEL RAILS.

How They are Made by the Bessemer Process.

Within sight of the battlefield where Braddock was defeated in 1755, near the present city of Pittsburgh, the Messrs. Carnegie have made amends for that repulse of civilization by the great victory of peace which is known in the commercial world as the Edgar Thomson Iron and Steel Works. Here iron ores are made into Bessemer steel rails before they are allowed to cool. The ores from mines in Pennsylvania, in Michigan, in the South, and from abroad are unloaded in heaps, between the walls of which are roads for carts and paths for wheelbarrows, laid out as streets in a city, far below the tops of the little mountains of ore and coke and limestone. Here the proper admixture of different kinds of ores, and with them of coke after limestone, are made and hoisted to the furnaces. These burn day and night, seven days a week, and to create the blast the power of a long row of enormous engines is required. Though singly they would have that most inaudible motion of the great Corliss engine, in the blast they produce make a roar of power more like elemental forces than of machinery of man's devising.

At the Carnegie Works the pig-iron stage of Bessemer steel manufacture is avoided. The molten iron is not allowed to cool, but is covered in iron cars directly to the Bessemer "converters." The "converter" is the elliptical vessel, swung high above the floor, in which the iron is converted to Bessemer steel. It swings on axles at either side, and the molten iron is run into it while it is in a horizontal position. Another great blast now does its work, this time of cold air, and as the converter gradually regains its vertical position the blast is started before the metal reaches the bottom of the vessel. With a great roar the flame shoots upward, and the oxygen is absorbed by the silicon and manganese. Then the flame increases in size and brilliancy, and becomes first orange and afterward purple, and when the carbon is removed it subsides. The converter is now tipped over, and the metallic manganese (spiegeleisen is generally used) that is necessary to complete the making of steel is added, and the flame and cinders shoot higher than ever, with great brilliancy and much noise. The space about the converter for a moment is filled with flying flame and sparks that make as brilliant a spectacle as can be conceived. All that now remains to be done is to pour the purified molten mass from the converter into ladles and thence into molds, where as soon as it becomes solid, it is Bessemer steel in ingots. It is not allowed to cool, but is loaded by hydraulic derricks on iron cars, and drawn by a locomotive into the rolling mill. There every ingot is placed in a furnace and again heated red-hot. On iron trucks the reheated ingot is conveyed to the blooming train, where it is forced between rollers time and again, every time within a narrower space, until it is considerably elongated. The ponderous machinery moves it on to a solid carriage, where it is cut into pieces, or "blooms," each of proper quantity to make a rail.

The rest of the process is simple, but it is simply Titanic. The next rollers the block of steel reaches elongate it still more, and shape it into a rail. The rail is cut smooth at each end by circular saws as quickly as matches are sawed from blocks of soft wood, the difference being that this saw-dust is red-hot sparks. The rail is straightened by the eye under another steam-hammer, but the rollers are bored at either end, it is now allowed to cool for the first time since it ceased to be ore, and is ready for the market. The manipulation of the red-hot metal, whether in molten or malleable condition, from the blast-furnaces to the last process, is almost wholly accomplished automatically; at the Edgar Thomson Works the only fuel used is natural gas.

Our Giddy Girls Abroad.
"One is well off in a garret at 20," sings the light-hearted Beranger; but the newspapers tell other tales of the workers in the great art centers. The cheapness of Europe is a delusion and a snare.
"It is so only on condition of going without tings, of living abroad as one would not think of living at home."
"The first time I went abroad," a lady once told me, "I had so little money that I lay awake nights planning how I could get through on it. I learned a great deal, but I should think any one a fool now who did as I did. I ignore all of the risks I ran was my excuse."
But there are numbers of those poor students still in Europe, and the straits to which they are reduced are often pathetic. Especially the slender, black-robed maidens, with their pale, eager faces, their eyes so wide open to all the wonder and enchantment of the old world, so veiled to misconceptions of their own character, are pathetic figures.
Sometimes they are pretty; almost always they have a certain charm of bright-eyed independence. They are usually older than they look; but many are far too young for the exposed and peculiar life they lead.
Henry James has sketched the type in his own fashion in "A Bundle of Letters." "She looks at everything, goes everywhere; passes her way, with her clear, quiet eyes wide open, skirting the edge of obscene abysses without suspecting them; exciting, without knowing it, the most injurious suspicions; and always holding her course, passionless, stainless, fearless."
The Germans are kind to these strangers within their gates, but to themselves they make emphatic reflections on that barbarous America whose fathers sheir off their daughters, who spend their all on instruction and trust to luck to get home.
Sometimes their trust is vain, and I recall one charming young woman who had stranded in Paris and was earning a meager living as a copyist. She had come abroad to study five years before, and she was not likely to return soon. She kept house like a bird, no four long flights, and she frankly admitted her economies in legal and beef.
It was picturesque, that little room, with its sunny window, its brick floor, its walls lined with her pictures, but it required some philosophy not to call her isolation a tempting fate.
A word, too, should be said, on the growing fashion of sending girls abroad to travel alone or with only a companion of their own age. It seems incredible that persons who can afford chaperonage for their daughters often send them without it, trusting to luck and the good nature of other American travelers to help them on.
A gentleman told me not long since that in his year abroad he had always some one besides his wife on his hands. Now it was a country woman absolutely alone, now a pair of young girls, now an invalid with a pretty daughter whom she had no strength to chaperon.
There is even a book recently advertised as the doings of two girls alone abroad. Now, we have no wish to recall the proprieties of thirty years ago, when a woman could hardly make a hundred-mile journey alone; but there is a limit here, as everywhere, of good sense and prudence. Lippincott's Magazine.

Very Remarkable Recovery.

Mr. Geo. V. Willing, of Manchester, Mich., writes: "My wife has been almost helpless for five years, so helpless that she could not turn over in bed alone. She used two bottles of Electric Bitters, and is so much improved, that she is able now to do her own work."
Electric Bitters will do all that is claimed for them. Hundreds of testimonials attest their great curative powers. Only fifty cents a bottle at Kirby & Robinson's Drug Store, Goldsboro, N. C.

LEMON ELIXIR.

From North Georgia.
Mrs. N. A. McEntire writes from Spring Place: "For many years I have been a sufferer from indigestion, sick headaches and nervous prostration caused from biliousness and constipation. I tried many remedies but got no permanent relief until I used Dr. Mozier's Lemon Elixir. It has done more for me than any other medicine I ever used. My daughter has been subject to chills and fever from her infancy. She has not recovered from the Lemon Elixir has restored her to perfect health."
W. A. James, Bell Station, Ala., writes: "I have suffered greatly from indigestion or dyspepsia. One bottle of Lemon Elixir did more good than all the medicine I ever took. 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle."
