BILL NYE.

Miscellaneous. The Humorist Disports Himself in Capital Society—He Admires Washington as a Matrimonial Market. CATARRH

I have just returned, writes Bill Nye at Washington to the Boston Globe, from a polite and recherche party here. Washington is the hot-bed of gavety, and general headquarters for the recherche business. t would be hard to find a bontonger aggregation than the one I was just at, to use the words of a gentleman who was there, and who asked me if I wrote "The Heathen Chinee."

He was a very talented man, with a broad sweep of skull and a vague learn
The dispatch was written by another of the war governors of the country's exciting period of civil strife. It was sent at the time the drait riots were occurring in New York, from Gov. David Tod, of Ohio, to Col. Fogg. of Cleveland. This is the telegram:

"We do hereby certify that we supervise the arrange ments for all the Monthly and Quarterly Drawings of the Louisiana State Lottery Company, and i period of the time the drait riots were occurring in New York, from Gov. David Tod, of Ohio, to Col. Fogg. of Cleveland. This is the telegram: broad sweep of skull and a vague learn- land. This is the telegram;

ing for something more tangible-to drink. He was in Washington, he said, agreeable. Price 50c. at Druggists; by mail, registered, 60 cts Circulars free. ELY BROTHERS, Druggists, Owego, N. Y. in the interest of Mingo couly. I forgot to ask him where Mingo county might be. He took a great interest in me, and talked with me long after he really had anything to say. He was one of those fluent conversationalists frequently met with in society. He used one of those web-perfecting talkers-the kind that can be fed with raw Roman punch and that will turn out punctuated talk in links like varnished sausages. Being a poor talker myself, and rather more fluent as a listener I did not interrupt him. He said that he was sorry to notice how many young girls and their parents came to Washington as they would to a matrimonial market.

I was sorry also to hear it. It pained me to know that young ladies should allow themselves to be bamboozled into matrimony. Why was it, I asked, that matrimony should ever single out the young and fair?

"Ah, said he, "it is indeed rough!" He then breathed a sigh that shook the foliage of the speckled geranium near by, and killed an artificial caterpillar that hung on its branches.

"Matrimony is all right," said he, "if properly brought about. It breaks my heart, though, to notice how Washington is used as a matrimonial market. It seems to me almost as if these here young ladies were brought here like slaves and exposed for sale." I had noticed that they were somewhat exposed, but I did not know they were for

I asked him if the waists of party dresses had always been so sadly in the minority, and he said they had.

I danced with a beautiful young Jady whose trail had evidentally caught in the doorway. She hadn't noticed it till apparel, neither should she feel too much above her clothes. I say this in the kindest spirit, because I believe that man should be a friend to woman. No family circle is complete without a woman. She is like a glad landscape to feeble it looks by the light of a good invention. It is a good thing to talk and murmur into and deposit profanity my farm with all ease and comfort. Refe any one to me. Your friend, WM. B. EMERSON.

vet much to learn from woman. It is said that our government officials are not sufficiently paid, and I presume that is the case, so it became necessary to economize in every way, but why should wives concentrate all fer, and there is more real suffering, more privation, and more destitution prevading the Washington scapula and clavicle this winter than I ever saw be-Tobacco cheaper than anybody else in

But I do not hope to change this custom, though I spoke to several ladies about it and asked them to think it over. I do not think they will. It seems almost wicked to cut off the best part of a dress and put it at the other end of the skirt to be trodden under the feet of men, as I may say. They smiled goodnaturedly at me as I tried to impress my views upon them, but should I go there again next season and mingle in the mad whirl of Washington, where these fair women are also mingling in said sad whirl, I presume that I will find them clothed in the same gas-light waists, with trimmings of real vertabræ down the back. Dry Goods, Hats, Boots and Still what does a man really know about the proper costume for women? He knows nothing whatever. He is in many ways inconsistent. Why does a man frown on a certain costume for his wife and admire it on the first woman he meets? Why does he fight shy of re-ligion and Christianity and talk very freely about the church, and get mad if his wife is an infidel?

Crops around Washington are looking well. Winter wheat, crocuses, and indefinite postponements were never in a more thrifty condition. Quite a number of people are here who are waiting to be confirmed. Judging from their babits, they are lingering around here in order to be confirmed drunkards.

I leave here tomorrow with a large, wet towel in my plug hat. Perhaps I should have said nothing on this dressreform question while my hat is fitting me so immediately. It is seldom that I step aside from the beaten path of rectitude, but last evening, on the way home, it seemed to me that I didn't do much else than step aside. At these parties no charge is made for punch. It is perfectly free. I asked a colored man who stood near the punch-bowl, and who replenished it ever and anon, what the damage was, and he drew himself up to his full height.

Possibly I did wrong but I hate to be a burden on anyone. It seems odd to me to go to a first-class dance and find would respectfully invite the attention of Ginners and Farmers to their usefulness. the supper and the band and the rum all paid for. It must cost a good deal of money to run the government.

The Minute Guard.

A New York correspondent writes as follows to the Cincinnati Enquirer: A time-stained and discolored telegram was placed in my hand last night by Col. William Perry Fogg, which was in something of the same ringing tone as the famous declaration of Gov. Dix. of New York: "If any man pulls down the union flag, shoot him on the spot.' The dispatch was written by another of COLUMBUS. O., July 20, 1863.-To THE COMMANDANT OF THE MINUTE GUARD, AT CLEVELAND: I have given Maj. Cary an order for two hundred stand of arms and ten thousand rounds of ammunition. God grant you may have no occasion to use their in defense of the peace of your city, but if you do, use no blank cartridges. DAVID TOD, Governor.

In speaking to me about the telegram, Col. Fogg said: "I was the commandant of the Minute guard to whom the telegram was addressed. I came across it vesterday in looking over some old papers, when its force struck me as it never had done before. It was read on the night it was received to two hundred substantial and loval citizens, most of them middle-aged men, as they stood in line, after having been put through their first drill in marchings and facings. Law college, where we were assembled, resounded with cheers for the old "war governor' of Ohio. Its effect was to put a decided quietus on the disloyal element that was rampant in the community, for we took pains to have it made public, and no disturbance occurred. We had expected the same troubles that New York suffered, but they were avoided, and a few weeks later the Minute guard disbanded. I found the dispatch with the muster-roll of the company among some old war ing relic," I remarked.

Many of the men who figured in it, ike John Worthington, are now dead. You see, there were none of them young men. The Grays were off to the war. The battery was gone. All the young men were gone. When the drafts were talked of there was a turbulent element that threatened to make trouble. I took a paper and went down Superior and Water street to see who she had walked out partially through her costume. I do not think a lady ought to give too much thought to her have answered another muster in the
