BIRDS SLAUGHTERED.

Millions of American Singing Birds Slaughtered to Fashion. The destruction of birds in the United States is awakening new and serious interest among ornithologists. A committee has been appointed by the American Ornithologists' Union to gather information bearing on the destruction and protection of North American birds.

A reporter called on Mr. J. A. Allen, one of the active members of the committee, in relation to the matter. The gentleman was found at the museum of natural history in Central Park. "We have protective bird laws," said Mr. Allen, "and if they were properly amended and enforced our birds would be fairly protected. As it is, their slaughter continues to increase from year to year, and unless it is immediately stopped incalculable injury to the country will follow and many of the species become extinct. There are those who would make bird collectors for museums in a measure responsible for the rapid decrease of birds in this country. The charge is founded. I have taken pains to gather data, and after carefully examining the records of the museums of the United States, I find that they contain the skins of less than 200,000 birds. This number is not a twentieth of the birds killed in a single season and sold to the hat trade. Our museum of natural history in Central Park contains but 15,000 bird-skins, and two-thirds of those were imported from foreign countries. The total number on exhibition in the National Museum at Washington is but 60,000. These 200,000 birds belonging to American science represents the collection of many years, while the vast numbers destroyed and sold to the milliners are the result of a single season's slaughter. This wholesale destruction of American song birds began with the present fashion of wearing birds on ladies' hats and raiment. It is true that many of the birds sold in the trade are imported, but they are fully balanced by those we send abroad. The number of birds annually slaughtered in this country for the sake of fashion amounts to many millions. As we have found by making careful estimates based on manufacturer's figures of birds bought and sold. The more beautiful the bird the more eagerly it is sought and the more money it will bring."

"What birds are most used by the New York bird dealers?" "Our sweetest singers and most industrious worm-catchers. Among them are the orioles, cedar-birds, goldfinches, bluebirds, redstarts, vireos, cherry birds, bluejays, red-winged blackbirds, meadow larks, swallows, bobolinks, sand-pipers, golden-winged woodpeckers, robins, shore larks, thrushes, insect-killing nighthawks, whip-poor-wills, white herons, egrets, much sought for on account of their long, graceful plumes, and terns or sea-swallow."

"The destruction of these birds has become a regular and systematic business. An experienced man, with two or three taxidermists, will go along the coast in the season and employ the natives to kill birds. It is surprising how many birds one of these New York agents will get in a few months. The islands around the Atlantic coast are favorite breeding-grounds for birds. The natives will know. An inducement of ten cents apiece for all birds delivered soon depletes the islands of their feathered inhabitants. The bird which costs ten cents in the country sells for 50 cents to $1 in the city. The cost is multiplied compared with the large profits and vast extent of the business. Herons and egrets, which were so plentiful in Florida a few years ago, have almost disappeared."

"An ordinary dealer in the country will sell 10,000 birds to his customers in a single season. Many of the larger jobbers handle from 30,000 to 40,000 birds in each. On Long Island and in New Jersey an immense number of birds are killed every season. A single neighborhood on Long Island will send from 300 to 500 birds to market a week. A single village in the back country ships from 50,000 to 80,000 birds during a summer. When the season is at its height from 5,000 to 10,000 birds are daily received by the New York taxidermists. A woman agent down in the quiet state of Maryland has been known to collect 50,000 birds (many of them the sweet singing Baltimore orioles) and ship them to Paris in a season. The islands along the seacoast between Philadelphia and Fortress Monroe are systematically robbed of their birds for the benefit of thoughtless, fashionable women. Wings of handsome birds are quoted in the Baltimore papers at from 30 cents to $1 apiece, and bird's eggs at from 5 to 8 cents each. In Washington the daily papers contain half-column advertisements giving particulars of beautifully colored birds' wings and breasts, which are offered for sale by the dozen or gross."

"We are going through the same experience that have long been complained of in England, where active measures are now taken to save birds. Over there an auction-room advertises for sale 6,228 birds of paradise, 4,974 pheasants, 40,446 Brazil birds, and 356,389 birds from the East Indies. It is a noticeable fact that the greater the slaughter and sale of song birds the less is the demand for ostrich feathers. "All birds are beneficial," continued Mr. Allen. They destroy insects, worms and noxious larvae. To the farmers and gardeners their services are invaluable. The country would be overrun and the crops destroyed but for the birds of America. In considering the causes of their destruction legitimate sportsmen and bird collectors for museums are of no particular account compared with the demands of the fashionable milliner and dressmaker, which are a hundred fold greater than all others. It is true that state laws are supposed to prohibit this shameful and indiscriminate slaughter of birds, but their provisions are violated with impunity by men who, under the cloak of a taxidermist's permit, become legalized agents for city millinery establishments, and do not hesitate to shoot birds in all places and seasons. Of course this wanton abuse of a lawful privilege is not practised by all alleged scientific collectors, but enough of them are violating their permits to work great destruction among the birds."

"There is another serious evil. It is the egg-collector. In many localities on the Atlantic coast the inhabitants make a business of robbing nests. The value of birds' eggs for food is trivial beside the value of birds to farmers in destroying worms and insects. In many places there are great colonies of sea-birds. There the natives collect their eggs by the boat-load and sell them in their villages by the barrel. This is done on Cape Cod, Long Island, New Jersey, Florida, Texas, and other states on the coast."

"What does your society propose to do toward remedying these evils?" asked the reporter. "We shall arouse public sentiment and win the support of leaders of fashion. We have already received most encouraging letters from New York ladies of wealth and power in the fashionable world. We shall encourage the formation of bird protective associations and anti-bird-wearing leagues. A strong public sentiment will spring up as soon as the facts are once understood. "In England a powerful society has been formed and is now at work against the fashion of wearing birds on hats for fashion's sake. The nobility are among its members, headed by such men as Tennyson and Robert Browning. Lady Mount Temple has already established an anti-bird-wearing league of her own, which is meeting with encouraging success." - N. Y. Herald.

Making Plate Glass.

"There is a plate of glass 66x54 inches, which is the largest size made in this country," remarked a prominent glass merchant of this city who reports as he was engaged in superintending the unpacking of a large box. "It was made in a Pittsburgh manufactory with natural gas as fuel, and is much superior to that made by coal, since the sulphur even in the best and purest coal blurs and coats the glass with patches, while if smoke comes in contact with it in the soft state a permanent stain is caused. Besides, when coal fuel is used the best of care can not prevent ashes, dust and solid particles from the furnace falling onto the molten glass and making flaws. "Gas fuel, however, has changed all of that, and has given Pittsburgh a great advantage, and glass can be made so much better and cheaper there that all of the factories have found themselves forced to go to Pittsburgh or go to pieces. "In a short time America can compete with French or German plate-glass, where manufactured gas is used."

"How is this glass made?" asked the newsmen. "Well, the hardest and most interesting part is the 'blow-in,'" was the reply. "The entire mass of molten material must be blown into shape by the breath. Messrs. Appert, of Clichy, France, claim to have discovered a process that will make glass-blowing by the mouth unnecessary, and it is to be hoped that they have, as the process is very painful and the men after a few years become pale-faced, with their cheeks hanging limp in folds, and some cases have been known where their cheeks have worn so thin that they actually cracked."

"What are the materials used to make the glass?" was the next question of the reporter. "Six hundred parts of sand, thirty parts of lime, forty parts of alkali, and some pulverized charcoal are put in a fire-brick pot, which is set in a furnace heated by gas and are brought to a molten state. A workman then plunges a long wrought-iron tube with a wooden handle and mouthpiece into the white-hot mass, and by alternately cooling and rolling it finally has a ball of glass many not only in weight adhering to the end. He turns it about until it becomes pear-shaped, and then hands it to the blower, who blows gently into it, at the same time constantly turning it, until it becomes the shape of a huge bottle. It takes a very strong man to do this, since for a plate of glass of this size the molten material will weigh thirty pounds."

"After it has been blown into the right shape," the speaker went on, "the end of the pipe is closed up, and the air, expanded by the heat, breaks a small hole in the end of the bottle, which the blower enlarges by twisting his tube around and puffing his breath into it until at length the bottle becomes a cylinder. A string of red hot iron is drawn over the upper part of the cylinder breaks it off evenly, and it is then cracked open lengthwise by a red-iron. Each side is heated, flattened out, tempered and polished, and finally becomes a great sheet of clear plate glass." - Cincinnati Sun.

One of the curiosities of light and heat is the fact that rays of the sun should pass through a cake of ice without melting it at all, as is the case when the thermometer stands a little above zero. That the rays of heat actually penetrate the ice is shown by the fact that a lens of ice may be used for setting fire to inflammable substances.

A Young Journalist has a Big Scoop. Among those who were fortunate enough to witness the late drawing of the Louisiana State Lottery was W. E. Seymour, the son of the well-known journalist, W. E. Seymour, of the New Orleans Star. He purchased one-tenth of ticket No. 23,408, which carried the second prize of $50,000. The Bank of Commerce of Memphis, Tenn., also held for collection one-fifth of said ticket. Owing to the small amount of capital collected by the People's Bank of this city, New Orleans Times-Democrat, June 10th, 1886.

THE MESSENGER Real Estate Agency, GOLDSBORO, N. C.

Our recent articles on immigration, designed to induce Northern capitalists and settlers with means to invest and locate in North Carolina, has brought in quite a number of letters of inquiry from parties who contemplate seeking homes in the South, asking for description of places for sale. We have also had numerous offers from land owners who wish to dispose of portions, or all, of their surplus lands, but with no definite description of lands or prices. This has induced us to establish the Messenger-Real-Estate-Agency in connection with this office, and our Mr. J. HOWARD BROWN will give to this department his personal supervision. In order to reach the desired class we have arranged to run an advertisement in some 1,000 newspapers in the Northern and Western States, offering to mail specimen copies of the MESSENGER and to furnish such information as may be desired, to all who will apply, and in this way we hope to reach the most desirable class of people and to bring the advantages of North Carolina before the very people who seek homes in the South. The MESSENGER will also be placed on file in a large number of Hotels, public Reading Rooms and Real Estate Exchanges in other States, and thus the advertisements of all wishing to sell lands will receive the greatest publicity. Our advertising rates are $5.00 for a two inch advertisement, to be inserted in our weekly edition every alternate week, for three months. In addition to this we will enter the lands so offered upon our printed circulars containing list of lands for sale by the Agency, and endeavor to secure a purchaser by giving these circulars a large distribution. We invite correspondence with land owners in all parts of the State, as our Agency is for the whole State, and we shall give no preference to any section. The mountains present attractions for some, the middle section for others, and the seaboard, for still others. We are now in correspondence with parties looking for large tracts for colonization, and with manufacturers seeking factory privileges and inducements for investing capital on joint account with established or projected enterprises. We also expect to organize excursions from the North and West of farmers and others wishing to visit North Carolina, and shall afford them unusual facilities for inspecting every part of our State and direct them especially to the lands listed and advertised by this Agency. The Messenger Publishing Company, Real Estate Department. J. HOWARD BROWN, Manager. apr29-tf
