TWO FORMS OF CORPULENCY.

The Characteristics of the Plethoric and the Anæmic-Secondary Affections. There are two forms of corpulency, charac- it upon the floor; "it is a miserable, terized by distinctive conditions of nutrition: they are called the plothoric and the anæmic. The former occurs more frequently in men of middle and advance life, and they present unmistakable evidences of a plethoric habit. The cases of an anæmic type are more commonly observed in women, and they are charicterized by distinct pallor of the skin and other signs of impoverishment of the blood, or anamic. Patients with plethoric corpulence have, as a rule, a better developed muscular system, greater appetite and suffer less from digestive disturbances. On the other hand, those affected with the opposite type are less muscular, have but little craving for meat or other blood forming articles of diet, and in them digestion is proverbially weak. Corpulent patients not only show a predisposition to a number of secondary affections, but also, under exposure to other unusual influences, exhibit a general less degree of tolerance than healthy persons. Their tendency to excessive perspiration is the cause of frequent "colds," and digestive disturbances more often follow indiscretions in eating. It is in the anæmic forms of corpulency of advanced life that apoplectic seizures are frequent. There are many other complications and affections which appear in consequence of corpulency, among the most important of which are diabetes and cancer.

It is an acknowledged fact that not only are the corpulent not exempt from any disease to which the thin are subject, but also in them all severe morbid processes, and especially all affections accompanied by intense fever, run their course with unusual malignity. In typhoid fever, for instance, when corpulent persons are attacked, they are more what interested him so much. endangered by the disease than the lean, or even weak and ill nourished subjects. Again, corpulent convalescents are comparatively slow in recovering from severe illnesses, and not infrequently in such instances restoration to health is but incomplete.-Cor. Boston

A Temple of Serpents.

The small town of Werda, in the kingdom of Dahomey, is celebrated for its temple of serpents, a long building in which the priests keep upward of 1,000 serpents of all sizes, which they feed with the birds and frogs brought to them as offerings by the natives. These serpents, many of them of enormous size, may be seen hanging from the beams Turpentine and Whiskey Stills, Brooks across the ceiling, with their heads hanging downward and in all sorts of strange contortions. The priests make the small serpents go through various evolutions by lightly touching them with a rod, but they do not venture to touch the largest ones, some of which are big enough to enfold a bullock in their coils. It often happens that some of these serpents make their way out of the temple est difficulty in coaxing them back. To kill a serpent intentionally is a crime punished with death; and if a European were to kill scarcely suffice to save his life. Any one kill- God. ing a serpent unintentionally must inform the priest of what has occurred and go through the course of purification, which takes place once a year.-St. James' Gazette. Always Walk Down Stairs. It is a good rule always to ride up in an elevator, and when coming down to take the for people with weak lungs, defective respiratory organs or heart disease. But going down stairs hurts nobody, but is good exercise; going down on a brisk run is really a good thing-it shakes up the anatomy without incurring the danger of overexertion; this shaking up is good for one's internal mechanism, which it accelerates, especially the liver, the kidneys and the blood circulation. When going up into a building I invariably ride up on the elevator if there is one, but when going down I take the stairs for it. It's a good rule, depend upon it.—Toledo Physician.

Lord Macaulay's Advice. In a letter to his niece Macaulay wrote: "I am always glad to make my little girl happy, and nothing pleases me so much as to see that she likes books. For when she is as old as I am she will find that they are better than all the tarts and cakes and toys and P. M. plays in the world. If any one would make me the greatest king that ever lived, with palaces and gardens, and fine dinners and wines and coaches, and beautiful clothes and hundreds of servants, on condition that I would not read books, I would not be a king. I would rather be a poor man in a garret with plenty of books than a king who did not love reading."

The Earthquake in Piccadilly. The other afternoon, when I should have been putting salt on the tails of partridges, I walked down Piccadilly. A triumphant newsboy tore up the thoroughfare shricking: "Great hurthquick in America." I saw a man rush to him and buy a copy. Turning to the report of the catastrophe, he glanced at it and fell against the railing. It transpired that the man was a visitor from Charleston, where he owned large property, and where all his friends were. In this manner was the calamity brought home to me. - London Country Gentleman.

Street Paving in Detroit. Very little of the street paving in Detroit is lone with stone, but with cedar blocks about six inches long, stood up edgeways. The blocks make a pretty good pavement, but in desirable payement for driving. - Chicago A Mixed Freight and Passenger Train leaves Herald

Mr. Gladstone's Simplicity. The Indpendence Belge writes that Mr. Gladstone put up in Brussels at the hotel where Gordon stopped two years ago, took a siesta in the park, wore a gray Macfarlane, carried his own portmanteau to the station, and, disdaining the comforts of a sleeping car, snugly ensconced himself in a first-class carriage.-Foreign Letter.

No Finished Workmen. The division of labor and improved machinery are doing away with the thorough learning of trades. When the present generation of shoemakers and blacksmiths are dead it will be hard work to find a man who can make a complete boot or make a horseshoe and nails and then shoe the horse properly .-New York Sun.

The "Preliminary Silence." Emerson used to say that the best part of the service to him was the preliminary silence and serenity before the clergyman and choir shattered their sanctity.

In Washington territory there are at present only eighteen counties, and about all of these were taken from Oregon when it was made a state. As many as 1,000 quakings of the earth have been felt in one day in New Zealand. In France a man's portrait cannot be sole

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TRETHING.
Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhoea, regulates the stemach and bowels, cures wind colle, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TRETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING.

Nothing in the Paper.

"There is nothing in this paper!" exclaimed pretty Gracie Loring, dashing stupid sheet anyhow!" Look again, you spoiled child of fortune! at its carefully printed columns, with the different headings, home and foreign news, the wit and humor, and miscellaneous items; then pause for a paper," for those who know nothing of its drudgery, the painstaking, the hours of mental weariness, the tedious labor it takes to make it please its various readers. No paper can be printed with its carefully prepared columns containing nothing, unless the editors, reporters, printers, and all connected with it, are a body of fools, which is a matter too absurd to be suggested. "There is nothing in the paper!" is such a general expression, used when people are not exactly suited with it. Riding once in a street car, I observed our counters. two gentlemen purchase the same newspaper. One, after glancing hastily over it, handed it across to a friend opposite, exclaiming as he did so:

"There, Sam; have the morning paper? There is nothing in it, however. It is scarcely worth lending. The other gentleman who had purchased the paper commenced reading it, and seemed evidently absorbed. Presently the man sitting beside him asked "Oh, everything!" he replied, "the paper is well gotten up this morning.

The editorials are especially fine, besides the general matter is most interesting. This instance shows that what pleases one person fails with another. Be assured it is no child's play to edit and conduct a newspaper. It is a very tedious, important, responsible position, and the man who satisfactorily conducts a well-circulated, popular newspaper, has almost the wisdom of Solomon. Let those who doubt the assertion take the editor's place for a little while; there will be nothing more needed for convincing proof. And as for our friend, Gracie Loring, when she is tempted to make such silly remarks, she had better pause to consider first where the fault lies, if in the paper or in her own silly little head. - Amelia Thropp.
