THE POINTER AND PARROT.

A Bird Which Was Inclined to Boss Things—A Difficult Pup.

Dr. Von Bremen, of New York, is a very good wing shot. Recently, in anticipation of a fall shooting, he bought a promising pointer pup, which he began training. The doctor never takes him off a present without remembering Mrs. Von Bremen. When he bought the pup for himself he bought a parrot for his wife. The pup was already used to obedience, and the inclined parrot to his breed was strong within him. The parrot is of a lively and happy disposition, and was a fluent talker when she arrived at the residence of the Von Bremens. Shortly after her arrival she announced to her name was Lovetta, and that the rest of the household could get along without her. The household was ordered to get her eye on the upper extension window sill.

In the course of the day the pointer pup found his way into the room where the cage stood, and he instantly located the bird. When he approached within a few yards of the cage, and then came within a beautiful pointing attitude. The parrot watched him intently for a moment, and then sang out loud and clear: "Ah there!"

"Ah there!" was the dog was paralyzed. He ceased pointing, dropped to a sitting posture, and gave way to his bewilderment. "Stay there," came in gruff and commanding tones from the parrot's cage.

The pup had been severely trained, and he failed to disobey. His head dropped between his forelegs, and in an attitude of utter depression he awaited further commands. The doctor had been looking on from the hallway, and when he entered the room the parrot was reviling the pup in a mixture of English and Spanish, and the pup was groveling in the rug, but afraid to run away.—New York Sun.

Display of Chrysanthemums. The New York Horticultural society promises a display of chrysanthemums this year that will eclipse all its previous exhibitions. They have prepared for nearly 1,000,000 chrysanthemums in the 12,000 feet of floor space engaged for the exhibit. Premiums to the amount of $2,500 and $300 divided into three prizes for the best twenty-five plants ought to bring into this class the finest blooms from many commercial and private gardens. One hundred and twenty-five other premiums are offered to florists, amateurs and gentlemen's gardeners. It is to be held the first week in November at Comptown hall, Forty-ninth street and Broadway.—Chicago Herald.

A Prominent Colored Man. James K. Hilyard is a colored man who is a credit to his race. Born under every disadvantage he is now one of the most prosperous and respected citizens of St. Paul, Minn. He is one of the few colored men of the world who have succeeded in rising to the highest degree in Masonry, having attained the thirty-third degree several years ago. He is also a prominent member of the order of Good Templars, and is an honored member of the Episcopal church.—New York Tribune.

Mud Cure for Snake Poison. A colored boy near Newbern, N. C., was bitten recently by a rattlesnake, and as medical aid was out of reach, the boy must have surely died but for the thoughtfulness of his companions. They dug a hole in the ground and placed both legs in it up to near the hips and packed the mud securely around him. The poison was entirely extracted, and the boy is now about well.—Boston Transcript.

At the Baden Races. Much amusement was excited at the Baden races a fortnight ago by the appearance in the first steeplechase of two "gentleman jockeys" who rode arrayed in full military uniform, and one of whom wore a pair of lavender kid gloves during the race. ### The Climate of Geological Times.

The peculiar climate of geological times has hitherto been treated as if it were a question of temperature only. Scientists have sought the cause of the remarkable warmth in arctic regions, but have left untouched other questions of equal and perhaps greater importance.

One can hardly contemplate the climatic conditions of that remote period without inquiring how there could be other than a great difference of temperature between the summers and winters of lands less than 8 deg. from the pole; and how could circumstances—environments—so unlike as the four or five months of day of those regions, and the twelve-hour day of the tropics, fail to produce great specific differences in their fauna or flora. The questions spontaneously arise: Is it possible that the days and nights in high latitudes were then as they are now? Must not the climate have been warm in January as well as in July? Must not the influences of the solar rays—the actinic force—have been distributed through the year with at least approximate uniformity in high as well as low latitudes? It is these questions, as well as those of temperature, that I shall consider in this paper. I propose to study the record left by the plants and animals which lived in those remote days. Some of their more obvious teachings are startling enough. Regions where now vegetation is of the scantiest character, where no trees exist save a few dwarf willows, where the winters are cold almost beyond endurance, were, as late as the Miocene, covered with magnificent forests of magnolias, oaks, cypresses, and a hundred other species, in more remote periods they abounded in plants and animals, whose fellows of identical species lived at the same time, or at least in the same geological period, near the equator.—Professor C. B. Waring, in Popular Science Monthly.

A report comes from London to the effect that the New York people—some call them birds, others post-asters—insist on calling to see Oliver Wendell Holmes, and when they are shown into his room, immediately strike an attitude and in a loud voice, and with much violent gesture, forthwith recite an ode or an address, to which he is expected to listen.
