From the East .-- The Yankees again in motion. We have late advices from our Kinston correspondent and from other sources which leave no doubt that the enemy is largely reinforced at Newbern and. that a movement has actually commenced. The point of attack seems to be Wilmington.

These reinforcements, or a large portion of them. have been sent by way of Norfolk, through Gates county, thence down the Chowan to Newbern. We learn that as many as eight thousand took this route at one time.

A "contraband" who escaped from Newbern says Butler the Beast is in command.

The force at Newbern is estimated at from 40,000 to 60,000, though doubtless exaggerated.

Last week a number of gunboars accended the Neuseas high as four miles above the mouth of Big! Swift Creek, but returned without doing any damage. We understand that a dispatch reached the execttive office on yesterday to the effect that the enexty had begun to move towards Wilmington.

We can assure the people that the proper steps wil be taken to look after these marauders.

A FICTION.—In our news columns on yesterday, we copied a portion of a pretended narrative of the perations around Richmond between Lee and Mc-Ciellan's armies. It purports to be copied originally from the "Cologne Gazette," and to have been written by a Prussian officer in the Confederate service. It is complimented as being "graphic." But it is a mere invention, written in the "conservative" style. It is utterly without truth .- Enquirer .

The New York Herald reports that Fort Hudson

SALE OF JARBATT'S HOTEL .- We understand that Mr. John Jarratt, one of the proprietors of Jarratt's H tel, has privately disposed of his interest (one half) in that popular establishment, to Mr. John E Friend, of this city, for $10,000. The sale of course embraces one half of the building and everything appertaining to it. The Hotel will hereafter be conducted under the auspices of Messrs. John E. Freind & Co.

-Pet. Express. The Express of yesterday says that Mr. Jarratt has re-purchased his interest and will continue in the

in Boston, on the war. In that harangue he said: o o Let Mr. Lincoln perpetuate this war, and hand it down to his successors in anything like its present guise, and in the canvass that begins eighteen months hence you will see a candidate on the other side of the mountain, one plank in whose platforn will be that the West desert the East and join her natural ally who holds the mouth of the Mississippi. If the Democratic politicians of Albany have their way, there is more danger of an alliance among twenty States leaving New England out in the cold, than there is of an alliance among twenty States leaving the cotton States out of the Union.

Commenting upon this extract the New York Mer-

Just so, Mr. Phillips. You and your friends are beginning to see in what an awkward dilemma you have place I New England. You made the war for the negro. You were willing to "let the Union slide," in order to free the slaves of the South, under the cover of "military necessity." You could not produce that necessity without first getting up a civil war, and you got up that war so ingeniously as to make it seem not your act, but the act of the South. Now you discover that the work of "wiping out" the South is not so easy a job as you supposed it would be. Your only remaining hope is in inciting the slaves to revolt .-Your panacea for all the terrible evils of this so called rebellion, is a servile insurrection. And you tell Mr. Lincoln, poor old man, that if he does not help you to set the negroes of the South to cuiting the throats of the women and children in that section, you will not only fail in your emancipation scheme, but that the war will end by a separation of the Union which will leave all Yankeedoodledom "out in the cold!" That is just what we have expected from the beginning, and that is just what will certainly occur, if the States which Yankee fanaticism and injustice have driven into secession cannot be forced back again. That they can or will be is hardly probable, if we may judge from the small progress that has yet been mule in the enterprise, after nearly two years of prodigious

We believe that the North has already put forth the greatest strength she will ever exert in this struggle. She is capable of more; but she has lost heart in the cause, and she has lost it only because of the gross manner in which the radical Abolition partisans of the Administration have misused both the armies and the treasures of a loyal but conservative people. We believe that the last army that the North will ever raise, and put in the field in this war, is now in the field, and that it must conquer the rebellion or fail. If it fails, then the dissolution of the old Union will be un fait accompli, and in that event the six States of New England, which tegether are not much, if any, bigger than Virginia, will find themselves "left alone in their glory." And they will have no right to confplain. They will really have earned the guerdon of isolation. Like arrogant partners, representing a very small proportion of joint capital, they have striven to bend the views, wishes and interests of the firm to their special benefit, and are likely, in the end, to be kicked out of a concern in which they have sought to enjoy a disproportionate control and advantage against all the plain stipulalitions and equities of the original contract.

In our opinion, events show that the great mistake made in forming the Union in the outset, was in taking New England into the partnership on any terms whatever. And we are quite as sure that no confederation of States of which she is a part can ever exist in prace, harmony and prosperity on this Continent. She is too selfish for any association foun led in mutual compromise of opposed interests; too intellectually conceited to subordinate her insane ideas of "higher law" to the collected wisdom of a great commonwealth, and too meddling in other people's business for a political system which allows no one State in the Union to entrench on the reserved rights of any other. New England, therefore, should be abandoned to her egotism.

SUPPORTING THE CREDIT OF THE CONFDERACY. It has heretofore been published that the State of Alabama has proposed to the Confederate Sisters, the guarantee by each, of its ratable proportion of

This patriotic proposition has been responded to by the Legislature of South Carolina, coupled, however, we are sorry to see, with some conditions; among them, perhaps a limitation of the guarantee to the joint sum of two hundred-millions. It is evident that if the States separately impose conditions, there can be no common basis of action and the whole scheme will fall through. In the Confederate Conress the States are all represented, and there infinitely better than by the separate action of their Legislatures, may the terms of a guarantee be suggested that shall come as nearly as possible to meeting the tiews of all. The Legislatures may very properly take care to have their respective views presented and advocated but to make each shade of opinion an inexorable condition would render impossible any valuable result. The simple proposition is for the States to guarantee in ratable proportion their share of the war debt. We assume that the debt will be paid, and that in one form or another, it will come out of the people. The guarantee by the States imposes no new or additional burden or obligation on the people. But the credit of the States would be a valuable re-inforcement of the credit of the Confederacy with all who are disposed to estimate the remote chances of a failure to establish our independence. And this improvement of our credit would be an exceedingly valuable contribution to our resources, and diminution of our expenses. We could thereby make better provision for our necessities now, as well as lighten the burthens of the future. The Confederate Government is the agent of the States, they the principals. They have as principals authorized the agent to pledge their joint faith and honor for a common purpose. If they can improve and sustain the credit of that agent by separately guaranteeing its engagements to the exsent of their respective ratable interests in the joint engagement, it is obvious wisdom to do so. They lose nothing by it, and they gain their respective shares of the joint

The Legislature of Virginia will meet in a few weeks. We hope now as ever that the old Commonwealth will be behind no sister in the ardor of her patrictism .- Enquirer.

This article wastes clothes with much loss rubbing I have sold a great many of these receipts, and so far, I have not heard a single complaint.

In using this preparation very little rubbing will be necessary. The ingredients for making the same are kept in most Drug and Grocery Stores. By using this preparation, clothes can be prepared for the starch and iron cheaper, and with more case, than the ordinary way of washing. The article can be made in a very short time.
