WAY THE ORDER

At the late term of the Federal Court, at Greensboro, Judge Dick very properly directed that arrests by United States Deputy Marshals, without warrants must not be made. That arrests have, occur and jilegally made there can be ne doubt, else why the order? The revenue laws, whenmikily executed, would no doubt be odious assume to our people; but then the rough, arbitrary, and often industrial manual manual of their execution, have made them ten fold more so. Many of those clothed with the gower o of those clothed with the gower of suppressing illicit distillation; have heretofore acted more will they were irresponsible potentites, than like civil officers of the law. It is no questionably the duly of all to obey the law; and because they regard the law as had and oppressive is no excuse for its disobedience. An observance of the law as here and oppressive is no excuse for its disobedience. vance of the law is one of the first characteristics of good clitteenship. But when those who came to a c that the laws are obeyed acted not only in violation of law; but, not unfrequently of common humanity, is it any wonder that the tendency of their couding to agravate the evil they co ue to ment was, in so many imstances, attended. We are glad to see the indications that a milder course is to be pursued. How could people but leat n. to hate a law, even had it not been from the first unitavorably re-garded, when its special ministers acted, with cruelty, and with litter want of regard or feeling for those whom they chose to designate as oftenders? The mode of collecting the internal revenue now inaugurated, we have no doubt will be much more effectual, while it will certainly be much less odions. We think it a bad law, and think it ought never to bare been made, and think it ought never to bare penalties are revere—unnecessarily so we think—and our people c. a hardly afford the risk for the small profit.

Mee Playes was the luckiest caudicate that ever ran as Passiont. He was lucky in being the nonlinee of a party which had betweening Boards, by which the popular rate could be changed from one candidate to another or thrown out and dispensed with altogether, as the case required. He was lucky in the prodigality of Jay Gould, and in the intrigues of John A. C. Gray, and the Texas Pacific Railroad, which owns Congressmen and brands Supreme Court Judges with its brand. He was lucky in Blaine, who, instead of sulking in his tents, after he was chested out of the nomination at Cincinnell, raised a great corruption fund among his own friends, and fasuting the bloody shirt swept through Mr. Hayes sown State, and acted it after Hayes confessed it was served.
