A New Swindle.

which the people of the South are resenting, is the efforts of some to sell them imitations of the real Simmons Liver Regulator, because they make more money by the imitation; and they care little that they swindle the people in selling them an inferior article. It's the money they are after, and the people can look out for themselves. Now this is just what the people are doing, and merchants are having a hard time trying to get people to take the stuff they offer them in place of Simmons Liver Regulator—which is the "King of Liver Medicines," because it never fails to give relief in all liver troubles. Be sure that you get Simmons Liver Regulator. You know it by the same old stamp of the Red Z on the package. It has never failed you, and people who have been persuaded to take something else have always come back again to the Old Friend. Better not take anything else but that made by J. H. ZELLYN & Co., Philadelphia.

Bessie was pale, too, for she felt a very painful interest in the scene. She knew that the strange men must include those who had known Drane in the West, and she took Johnson to be a distinguished representative of the family, whose words would be a full explanation of Drane's mental condition. She tried to attract his attention; to call him to her side, and ask him whether it was true that his unfortunate kinsman was unbalanced.

Mr. Sanford Drane, the genuine, was the first to break the silence which had fallen upon the party. "I beg your pardon," said he to Rev. Mr. Knowles, "but I really do not see why we have all invaded your house. Has this unhappy young man—pointing to Lawrence—had any dealings with you during his recent wanderings? I should tell you that I am his uncle, and that I have come to take him home with me, where I trust that rest and medical treatment will restore him to the full command of his faculties."

married. This whole complication results from an inexplicable error of Rev. Mr. Knowles, who married this man—indicating Johnson—"to that young woman in the corner."

"Poor fellow!" said Rev. Mr. Knowles, "he is wandering again." "I am not wandering," said Lawrence. "The fact is that this woman, taking advantage of Mr. Knowles' error, now claims me as her husband because she knows me to be rich."

"I couldn't write novels, as some women do," Nellie continued, "because I'd been brought up quiet and proper and hadn't seen any of these horrid, frantic things they write about. So I just got a place as a maid. It was with a rich woman in high society, and I've been thrown in just such company for years. It's an awful strain on a young girl's character to associate with such people. They make you do an awful lot of lying for them. And then there's the uniform—the servant's dress. That's the thing that does the real mischief. It's all the time saying to the girl that wears it: 'You're only a slave. What difference does it make how you behave? You can't go to Heaven in such clothes, anyhow.' I got to thinking that I wasn't as good as the other women because I couldn't dress as well; and so when I saw the chance to steal your dresses I said to myself that it would make a good girl of me."

UNCLE SAM'S FLAGS.

Interesting Details from the Workshops Where They Are Made. The Numerous Flags Used by the United States Navy—Something About Their Manufacture—How the Bunting is Tested.

Before a man-o-war is completely equipped she must be supplied with a varied assortment of the flags of all nations, says the Boston Globe. The flag locker of a cruiser like the New York will contain more than two hundred different ensigns.

All the flags for our navy are made in the equipment building at the Brooklyn navy yard. The floor of the flag room is covered with lines, representing the exact measurements of the various ensigns, and it is no easy matter to turn out a flag which will be exactly according to pattern, both as to design and measurement.

There are eight colors used in flags—red, white, blue, orange, yellow, green, brown, black and canary yellow. The canary yellow is used instead of white in flags used for signaling. This is because it is found that, when signaling at a distance, a white flag or a device on a white ground blends with the horizon and becomes almost invisible.

The largest American flag made is called No. 1. It measures 34.80 feet in length and 13.12 feet in breadth, and is very rarely used. The size called No. 2, which is considerably smaller, is the one generally used by warships.

Cruisers carry the stars and stripes in seven different sizes, but only the Minneapolis and the Detroit fly the gigantic No. 1 size. The most difficult flag to make is that of San Salvador. This flag requires all of the colors, and Costa Rica runs it close, requiring all but brown.

Our own flag is by no means an easy one to make. The forty-four stars in their blue field have to be accurately arranged, and the stripes mathematically exact according to the official pattern. The stars are made of muslin, folded twenty-five times and punched out by a steel punch, which cuts a dozen or more stars at each operation.

There are used in the navy yard fifty thousand yards of bunting annually, which is all made in the United States. Before being made up into flags the bunting is put to a very severe test. From each lot a sample is taken and steeped in fresh water for twenty-four hours. After that it is thoroughly scrubbed with strong soap and then rinsed and dried. It is then exposed to the direct sunlight for eighteen hours, and if it shows no fading in color it is accepted.

The industry gives employment to a great many men and women. SHE KISSED HIM. After That There Was Nothing to Do But Order Orange Blossoms. A kiss once played an important part in the life of the famous Belgium statesman, Frere-Orban. In his youth the future minister was a poor student, bearing the simple name of Frere. He had great difficulty in earning enough money to keep him at the university till he was ready to pass his examination in the department of law.

WRONGDOERS.

All Classes of Society Are Represented About Equally. I crossed on one of the big Atlantic liners lately, with five hundred other passengers, says P. L. Ford. They were naturally people of intelligence and presumably of easy circumstances. Yet at least half of those people were planning to rob our government of money by contributing plans to avoid paying duties truly owed. To do this all of them had to break our laws, and in most cases had, in addition, to lie deliberately.

Many of them were planning to accomplish this theft by the bribery of the custom house inspectors, thus not merely making themselves thieves, but bribing other men to do wrong. In this city I can show you blocks so densely inhabited that they are an election district themselves. Blocks in which twenty people live and sleep in a single room year after year, where the birth of a little life into the world means that all must eat less and be less warm.

But I cannot find in the poorest and vilest parts of the city any block where the percentage of liars and thieves and bribe givers is as large as was that among the first-class passengers of that floating palace. Each condition of society has its own misdoings, and I believe varies little in the percentage of wrongdoers to the whole.

Married a Century.

We have all heard of tin weddings, celebrated after ten years of marriage, of crystal weddings, after fifteen years, of china weddings, after twenty, of silver after twenty-five, of gold after fifty and of diamond after seventy-five, or, as some folks celebrate it, after eighty years. But the scale of celebration does not seem to extend any further, and one wonders what precious thing would be selected to give its name to a wedding recently celebrated in Hungary—the hundredth anniversary of the marriage of Jean Szathmary and his wife.

This appears to be a circumstance which is entirely impossible. But the marriage of this aged pair is duly and officially recorded as having taken place in May, 1794, at which time, according to the record, they were of marriageable age. As in Hungary at that time a bridegroom must have reached the age of twenty and the bride that of fifteen, the pair must now be at least one hundred and twenty and one hundred and fifteen years old respectively.

Light from Car Axle Dynamos. The lighting of railway cars generated by the revolution of the axles of the cars has not proven the success expected of it. A train running at good speed formed the basis for a most excellent light, but this speed was not uniform, and thus the flow of electricity became uncertain, and the intervention of the storage battery hardly overcame the difficulty. Roads using this system are gradually abandoning it.—Hardware.

It is Said "Some men are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them." It is a right to have been true when advancement came through the favor of Kings and Queens. But in this American republic and in this nineteenth century there is but one way for a man to become great. He must achieve greatness, and no man can achieve greatness without education. With education the poorest boy may become the greatest man, though we can not all be presidents. The most important question is: Would we be prepared to perform the duties of a great office if it were thrust upon us? We probably would if we should do so.

One Great President did. He is said to have, as his constant companion, the Encyclopedia Britannica. He is even said to have kept a bottle of the private car while making a campaign tour. This man of diligence and intelligence made his many friends and admirers. There is a great principle involved in this idea. If you look up just one question each day you will become an educated person, and you learn to enjoy it. These questions should be investigated right when they come up, while your mind is curious; then you won't forget what you read, you can't if you try. But to do this you need the Encyclopedia Britannica and The Character Character is ready to assist you by offering this great library for
