Our Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, June 14, 1895.—No member of the Cabinet ever made a more favorable impression upon his first appearance in Washington than Attorney General Harmon has.

Speaking of ex-Secretary Whitney's published interview, Mr. Ira M. Davis, of Albany, N. Y., says: 'It was Horatio Seymour who wrote to his friends when his name was mentioned in connection with the Presidential nomination, but your candidate I cannot be.'

According to Hon. E. W. Durant, a democratic state Senator of Minnesota, now visiting Washington, the party that comes out the strongest for sound money is the party that will elect the next President.

The Georgia delegation which visited Washington for the purpose of inviting President Cleveland and his cabinet to attend the Atlanta Exposition returned home in a very good humor.

Secretary Olney's first move as Secretary of State was an important one. He believes that the United States should do just as it would insist that other countries should do under similar circumstances.

President Cleveland has cleared his desk and will, probably before this letter is printed, join his wife and children at Gray Gables, where he will spend the hot weather.

tend to all public business requiring his personal attention, just the same as if he remained at the White House.

A Revolutionary Anecdote.

Among the theses written by the members of the School of History of the University of North Carolina and submitted to a committee of gentlemen in Raleigh for the determination of relative merits of the historical sketches is one entitled 'The Settlement of Hawfields', which contains many things of interest.

'After the battle at Moore's Creek Bridge, a day of thanksgiving was appointed at Hawfields Church. The Reverend Mr. DeBow was dwelling with much warmth on the evidences of an over-ruling providence that had brought victory in this hour of trial and darkness.

After the war Joseph Hodge became sheriff of Orange county.

Some Questions And Answers.

The Dry Goods Economist, of New York City, appreciating the general desire for reliable information as to the recent improvement in business, has done the country a service by sending the following questions to houses doing business in all sections of the Union.

'1. Do you regard the present signs of commercial prosperity as a trustworthy indication of a permanent improvement?' '2. Do you anticipate higher prices?' '3. Do you think that any advance in raw materials is likely to effect the prices of fabrics this coming season?' '4. Has the recently manifested upward tendency of prices had any noticeable effect on the volume of your current and advance sales?' '5. Do you believe that prices will eventually adjust themselves to a basis approaching that of '91 and '92, or will they remain nearer the present low scale?' '6. What do you hear from your customers regarding industrial conditions?' '7. What is your impression regarding conditions of stocks in the hands of retailers?' '8. What do you think of the outlook for fall business?'

The most gratifying feature of the returns is the fact that about 90 per cent. of the houses responding say that in their opinion, appearances are indicative of a return, more or less rapid, to permanent prosperity.

The contract for the electric launches for the lakes of the Cotton States and International Exposition has been let to Gen. C. H. Barney, of New York.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Clover-as-a Fertilizing Crop.

St. Louis Republic.

The farmer who so manages his land as to keep it covered with a growing crop of some kind will be able to maintain its fertility much better than if it is left bare a portion of the time.

One advantage with clover is that as soon as the first crop is taken off a second growth starts up to shade the soil. This can always be used, either by pasturing, after a good start to grow has been made, or it can be cut for hay, or allowed to mature seed and then be harvested; or after a good start to grow has been secured, it can be plowed under to enrich the soil.

When clover is sown with wheat or oats the land does not stand idle. If the crop is harvested the tops soon start out to growing, the plants will soon shade the soil, protecting it, while the roots will be pushing down into the sub-soil, bringing up fertility nearer the surface, where it will be available for future crops.

Clover is also a cleansing crop to the land. Its dense growth shading the land and keeping it moist, is favorable to the germination of whatever seeds there may be in the soil, but it also prevents other plants weeds &c., from reaching the light, and in consequence they soon die.

Then again keeping the land in clover or some growing crop helps to prevent injury by washing. In some soils this is quite an item.

A safe rule is to sow clover at every opportunity. Keep the ground occupied in some way.

Hard Times Fill The School Houses.

News and Observer.

The readers of this paper, who have kept up with the reports of the commencement exercises of the schools and colleges this year, have doubtless been struck with the statement, that 'the attendance is larger than ever before,' and 'there has been a large increase in the number of students.'

Why is it, in times of extraordinary financial pressure and tightness in money matters, that all the schools have larger attendance? The time was when school attendance was the gauge of prosperity.

Hard times may not be the barometer of school attendance, for the great educational awakening has stirred up young and old to the importance of educating all the people, but it is certain that hard times have not prevented an increase in school attendance, if indeed the financial depression has not contributed greatly to filling the schools and colleges from all ranks of life.

Over A Hundred Years Ago.

St. Louis Republic.

A few years ago a Virginia correspondent to the Petersburg Index Appeal in writing upon the early history of tobacco quoted from Burk's history of Virginia to prove that tobacco was first found growing in Virginia soil.

An act to establish an inspection of tobacco at Greenville, on Tar river. Whereas it may be beneficial to many citizens of this State, that an inspection of tobacco be established in Pitt county, on the South side of Tar river, at the town of Greenville:

1. Be it heretofore enacted by the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That the county court of Pitt shall annually appoint two discreet and careful men, well acquainted with the nature and quality of tobacco, to be Inspectors thereof; who shall take the same oath, be subject to the same rules, regulations and restrictions which Inspectors of tobacco are subject to in this State.

2. And it is further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the Inspectors so appointed shall have and receive from the owners of tobacco, the sum of four shillings for every hoghead, and the sum of one shilling for each and every hundred weight of transfer tobacco by them inspected, in full compensation for their trouble.

3. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the tobacco so inspected shall be held and deemed merchantable, as if the same had been inspected at any other inspection in this State.

A Very Old Lady Dies—A Marriage—75 Chickens Killed by Minis—Other News From Southwest Alamance.

Correspondence of The Gleaner.

Married on the 9th, at Mt. Zion Church, Mr. Jesse Patterson, of Burlington, and Miss Mary Keck, of Alamance, Rev. J. L. Smith officiating.

Died, at her home on the 11th, Mrs. Katharine Spoon. She had been afflicted for some time and was the oldest lady in the neighborhood, being in her 90th year.

Minks are plying havoc in poultry yards. We understand about 75 chickens have been killed for Mrs. J. R. Foster in the past few days.

Sweet potatoes slips are scarcer than was ever known before, hardly a one-fourth crop can be planted.

People are still planting corn and setting tobacco.

Among the Poultry.

St. Louis Republic.

Sunflower seed add luster to the plumage.

Oats are one of the very best feeds for moulting hens.

To be certain of having fresh eggs now, care must be taken to gather them daily.

The Pekin ducks develop early and are a good market fowl.

Train the young poultry to roost in the poultry house from the start.

It does not pay to be economical by starving the young growing fowls.

The laying of unusually large eggs denotes that the hens are in an over-fat condition.

Geese thrive on plenty of good pasturage and plenty of water.

If you have a number of good old hens, do not change them all for pullets. Keep some of the old hens.

Mixing scotch snuff or insect powder in the dust bath will help to rid the fowls of lice.

If ducklings are exposed to wet weather they are apt to take cramp in their legs.

Better not hatch out any more chickens until September. They will not thrive in the hot weather.

Do not keep too many fowls together. Small flocks will cared for will give the best results.

It is well to remember that as the chickens grow and increase in size they will need room.

The roosts should be low, especially for large heavy fowls and should all be of the same height.

If you are obliged to confine the fowls now, see that they have a supply of green food daily.

Fowls that have the run of the farm now, do not need much grain. The bugs and insects they pick up take the place of it.

The Minorcas, Leghorns and Blk Spanish chickens are valued for their laying.

Milk and wheat are good material with which to feed the young chickens. They furnish the materials from which bone is made.

The sooner the hens get through their moulting, the sooner they will begin laying again.

The good layers are active and generally on the move, the first birds out in the morning and last to roost at night.

The time to gather feathers from ducks and geese is when the feathers are ripe. Do not wait until the fowls lose a part of them.

When hens stop laying see if they cannot be started again by changing the feed; give less grain, and more meat and skim milk.

Feathers and combs are largely matters of fancy, but egg laying and chicken raising are a matter of business.

All hens that cannot be depended upon for winter layers or that are not needed as mothers next spring, should be fattened and marketed as soon as possible.

Turkeys must have a good range to be profitable. They are bug-eaters by nature and must have a good stretch of territory to forage in order to do well.

That tired feeling, loss of appetite and nervous prostration are driven away by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which makes pure blood.

The demand for space in the Woman's Building at the Cotton States and International Exposition has been so great that the Woman's Board has been compelled to ask for an appropriation for an annex.
