SPACE ECONOMIZER. Combination Rocat and Droppings Board Fixture. A simple device to economize space and labor is described by James Rady of Indiana in Reliable Poultry Journal. Mr. Rady says:

The roosts are ten feet long, three in number, and made of 2 by 2 inch hard pine with the corners rounded. They rest upon 2½ by 1½ inch strips three feet six inches long, the back ends of which are hinged to the wall of the house. These are supported in front by uprights of the same dimensions, also three feet six inches long.

and are fastened to them with one bolt so as to make a swing joint. The platform or droppings board is also ten feet long and two feet nine inches wide, set with its back edge nine inches from the wall and standing nine inches from the floor. The cleats upon the underside of this platform, which support and hold it together,

FOLDING BOOST AND PLATFORM. the building in the same manner as the roost supports. At the front they are fastened to the uprights with the swing joint fastenings described above. Two V shaped troughs, each five fee long, are placed on the floor against the wall under the rear of the droppings board. To the middle of the roost farthest from the wall is attached a half inch rope, which is passed through a pulley on the wall above and furnished with a ring at its other end. By grasping this ring the roosts and platform are pulled up and folded back against the wall, where they are out of the way. and no birds can roost upon it in the daytime. The ring may be slipped over a hook screwed to the underside of the platform to hold the fixture in

The platform is sprinkled each even ing with sawdust and slaked lime, so that when it is raised in the morning the droppings slide off into the troughs and are easily removed. This fixture folded up leaves the en tire door free from incumbrance for a scratching room. The cost of making is not heavy and the labor of cleaning is somewhat reduced.

HEROISM IN ANIMALS. It Is Not More Uncommon Then Is

Brute Maternal Affection, A writer on natural history complains that men are prone to regard masculine courage in defense of others as a virtue purely human. In reality self sacrifice for the female sex or for the young is part of the scheme of nature, and every male thing is strong and splendid in appearance because he is the descendant of those who have proudly held and guarded "the privilege of death." Another writer tells a story which illustrates this point. Two ists, bunting at night, clam

Why It's the Tuesday After the First Monday In November. Why should the law prescribe "the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November" instead of saying "the first Tuesday?" Like many other small things this provision introduces an inperesting picture of the past. Although the constitution requires the electors in all the states to meet and choose a president on the same day, it was not until 1845 that a law was passed by congress providing that the electors should be chosen on the same day throughout the United States. When William Henry Harrison was the Whig candidate, in 1840, New York began to vote on the first Monday in November, and the polls were kept open until Wednesday night. Electio day in Massachusetts was the second Monday, but before that day, in this instance, enough states had voted to decide the contest. The National Intelligencer of that year records that several thousand aged and infirm Whigs in Massachusetts did not bother to go to the polls.

Delaware voted a day later than Massachusetts. Illinois, Indiana and Pennsylvania were among the early voting states. Alabama was one of the last. This diversity, combined with slow methods of transmitting news, left the election results in doubt for many days. The system was not satisfactory. The states that voted early had an undue influence on the result. Especially was this true as communication became more rapid, and by 1840 an enthusiastic editor told how the news from Pittsburg had been brought to New York in thirty-five hours. "This." he added significantly, "is a sign of the times." Congress accordingly decided to establish a uniform day. The original bill named the first Tuesday in November, but it was found necessary to harmonize this with the requirement that not more than thirty days should elapse before the meeting of the electoral colleges in the different states, which had been set for the first Wednesday in December. When Tues day is the first day of November, De cember will have no Wednesday till the seventh. The interval is thirty-seven days. Under the law as it was passed in 1845 not more than twenty nine days can elapse between election day and the first Wednesday in De cember. Under the law of 1887 the electors do not meet to give their votes until the second Monday in January .-Youth's Companion.

NAST'S SURPRISE.

Pramatic Climax In the Convention Which Nominated Grant.

In May, 1868, the Republican na tional convention came along. Nast went to Chicago to be present.

It was settled beforehand that General Grant was to be the Republican presidential candidate. The great sollier had maintained a calm and noble dignity through all the trying days of conflict between congress and Andrew Johnson and was now honored almost as much for his diplomacy as for his success at arms. Indeed the mantle of sweet renown left by Lincoln would seem to have been laid upon the shoulders of Grant, and he wore it with be-coming grandeur and humility. Realizing that the convention would name Grant as its choice, Nast pro-pared a little surprise for the event. He painted upon a large curtain the He painted upon a large curtain the White House entrance, with two ped-estals, one on each side, bearing the words, "Republican Nomines, Chicago, May 20," and "Democratic Nomines, New York, July 4," respectively. On the Republican pedestal was seated the figure of Grant, while Columbia stood mointing to the empty place opposite. pointing to the empty place opposite. Below were the words, "Match Him?" Noving Pictures and Seasickness Successive pictures have been taken at intervals during an ocean voyage to show the life aboard ship, the swing of the great sens and the rolling and pitching of the steamer. The heave and swing of the steamer and the mountainous waves have been so realistically shown on the screen in the theater that some squeamish specia-tors have been made almost seasick. It might be comforting to those who were made unhappy by the sight of the heaving seas to know that the operator who took one series of sea pictures, when lashed with his machine in the lookout place on the foremast of the steamer, suffered terribly from seasickness and would have been glad enough to set his foot on solid ground; nevertheless he stuck to his post and com-pleted the series.--From "Stories of In-ventors," by Russell Doubleday: with a little brush.
