Another Letter from Paris.

To The Gleaner from Dr. D. A. Long.

Paris, April 8th, 1908. Just a few things about the most beautiful city in the world. Go to the top of the Eiffel Tower on the bank of the Seine, and look down one thousand feet at the city of 2,760,000 people. The broad clean streets walled with magnificent buildings and lined with great forests of trees. These are the famous boulevards of Paris. The streets are washed with hose every morning. As you cast your eyes down to the Seine, you see a little island farther up the river, with a great church upon it. That is the "Ile de la Cite" upon which the Paril, a tribe of half-savage men, had their chief town when Caesar subdued this part of Gaul, almost two thousand years ago. It became an important settlement under the Romans, and centuries later was made capital of France, having been the residence of the French kings for almost one thousand years.

When you start out on the streets you will find that the French love the open air, walks and drives. There are benches and chairs along the streets. The benches are free. If you take a chair, you will pay for it, whether you are seated for a moment or an hour. The girls and women take their sewing out on the streets, and chat and work while they watch the go by. Each of the public gardens and parks looks as though a picnic was being held in it, especially on Saturday afternoons, when many families eat their luncheon under the trees.

The Arc de Triomphe (ark d'tre-ohf) is one of the most beautiful monuments in the world. It was begun by the great Napoleon in 1806 to commemorate the glories of the French in some of their wars. Then you can go to the Camps 'Elysees (shom za-le-za'); then to the Place de la Concorde (kon-kord) But there is so much to see. You will linger at the Garden of the Tuileries (two-le-ri-iz), where the Kings of France used to live, and just beyond are the Grand Museum and Art Gallery of the Louvre, one of the finest of its kind in the world. As we turn and look in the opposite direction, we see the tall, round pillar of the Column Vendome (von-dom) with Napoleon's statue on top made from the cannon which Napoleon captured from the Austrians and Russians; and that church to left is the Madeleine, one of the most beautiful in the world. We go a little farther and see one of the finest opera houses in the world. Then take a little time to look at the beautiful fountains, the great Egyptian Obelisk, and the statues representing the chief towns and cities of France. Now watch the boulevards and see how the shops are lined. We seem to be going through a great exposition. The latest styles in hats and gowns come from Paris. Merchants from all nations are here. Now come, Mr. Editor, and visit the Halles Centrales (al son-tral) and see the greatest markets in Paris. They cover about twenty acres. The principal things to notice outside of what you would notice in New York or Chicago, are snails, horse, mule and donkey meat for sale. The heads of the animals at the stalls. About a million lbs. of snails sold annually. Now we go into Notre Dame and stand and look at the spot where Napoleon put the crown on his own head. Then to the Pantheon, where so many of the noted Frenchmen are buried, and from there to the Hotel des Invalides (o-tel' da-san-va-led') to take a look at the tomb of Napoleon.

This place was founded centuries ago as a home for the old soldiers of France it is situated on the South side of the Seine, and is inhabited by many French veterans, one of whom comes forward and acts as our guide. He leads us into the church and shows us the great circular crypt under the dome, where Napoleon's sarcophagus lies. We lean over the marble balustrade and look down upon an immense block of reddish brown granite, thirteen feet long, fourteen feet high, and six feet wide, resting on a pedestal of polished green stone. It is a gigantic coffin which was cut from one solid block of stone, and brought here at an enormous expense. The crypt is floored with mosaic, decorated with crowns of laurel in stone, there are monuments about it, and the old soldier points out the altar on which is carved this quotation from Don Quixote's will: "I desire that my ashes may repose on the banks of the Seine in the midst of the French people whom I have ever loved."

France is a Republic. Their laws are made by a Senate and Chamber of Deputies, the latter corresponding to our house of Representatives, the Senate Chamber is in shape of a half moon. The members sit in semi-circular rows rising one above the other. The President of the Senate sits on a rostrum in front. In front of the President is a little desk. In our Congress at Washington the members rise and speak at their seats. In France, they have to come, when they speak, one at a time and stand at this little desk.

A Woman Tells How to Relieve Rheumatic Pains

I have been a very great sufferer from the dreadful disease, rheumatism, for a number of years. I have tried many medicines but never got much relief from any of them until two years ago, when I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I found relief before I had used all of one bottle, but kept on applying it and soon felt like a different woman. Through my advice many of my friends have tried it and can tell you how wonderful it has worked.—Mrs. Sarah A. Cole, 140 S. New St., Dover, Del. Chamberlain's Pain Balm is a liniment. The relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. It makes rest and sleep possible. For sale by Graham Drug Co.

Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, April 25, 1908.

The President's policies have received a severe jolt in Congress during the past week, the Senate leaders having practically decided to do almost nothing which the Executive has recommended. The Steering Committee of the Senate held a formal meeting to decide on the legislative programme for the remainder of the session. The first decision reached was that adjournment should be taken on May 16, unless something happened in the House to prevent the necessary cooperation of that body. It was further decided that no action would be taken on any of the proposed amendments to the Interstate Commerce or the Anti-Trusts acts; that only two battleships would be authorized; that no anti-injunction bill would be considered; that no vote would be had on the Brownsville resolutions and that the Senate would make no concessions to the House on the subject of financial legislation. In this connection, Senator Aldrich told the story of two men in a boat, one of whom wanted to go to sea and the other to cast anchor. Finally, the one said "Well I'll anchor my end of the boat and you can go to sea with the other and be hanged."

That, said Mr. Aldrich was the position of the Senate. It would anchor all financial legislation to sound business principles and the House could go to sea with its end of the boat if it could find a way to do so. The week in the House has been marked by the most extraordinary and outrageous ruling every perpetrated by a Speaker of that body. In the face of an explicit demand for the yeas and nays preferred by the Democratic leader, Mr. Williams, the Speaker declared the House adjourned on a viva voce vote, despite the constitutional provision that the minority shall always have the privilege of demanding the yeas and nays. Mr. Williams introduced, the next day, a resolution censuring Speaker Cannon but his cowed supporters promptly voted it down. Mr. Williams said later that in all the history of the House no Speaker had so deliberately struck at the dignity of the body as a deliberative assembly as had Mr. Cannon who by this piece of tyranny fairly outdoes anything attempted by Speaker Reed at the time when he won the sobriquet of "Czar" of the House.

The Republicans in the Senate have struck a snag in their Brownsville plans. The Steering Committee, as I have said above, decided not to permit the matter to come to a vote, but the rank and file of the Republican Senators have organized a revolt. Senator Borah in a powerful speech denounced the effort to play politics with the Brownsville outrage as pusillanimous to the last degree, but that is a form of pusillanimity which the Republicans seem unable to escape. Of course the great flaw in their system is the fact that they have long catered to the negro vote and counted on it to carry certain districts which were normally Democratic. Now the negroes are demanding that they whitewash and restore to the army the soldiers who shot up the town of Brownsville and many Republicans are afraid to say them nay. They have Senator Foraker to thank for this situation but, as Mr. Cleveland put it, "it is a condition and not a theory" which confronts them. It is still difficult to foresee the outcome. If they restore the negroes to the army they will be condemned by all honest white men, and if that do not they will lose thousands of negro votes, and they can see no way out, while Mr. Foraker, in his almost insane desire to injure Secretary Taft keeps fomenting the negro question.

The President is thoroughly out of patience with Congress. He and his Postmaster General are intensely in earnest in their advocacy of postal savings banks and the Senate committee on Postoffices and Post Roads has favorably reported a bill providing for their establishment to the Senate, but the leaders have listened to the plea of the bankers who do not want this sort of competition and have decided not to allow the measure to come to a vote. What the outcome of this situation will be cannot be foretold, but it now seems probable that no action will be taken at this session.

There has been reported to the House a bill providing for publicity for campaign contributions, but the Democratic members of the committee which reported the bill tell me it is so loosely drawn that it affords all sorts of loopholes for escape and that its enactment will be merely bluff with which to satisfy an insistent public demand. There are few Republicans who would care to have an effective law along those lines on the statutes, as is shown by the fact that the most insistent advocacy produced no effect with the last Congress. It seems probable that the House will pass this bill and then leave it to the Senate to kill it by non-action.

Are due to indigestion. Many-sides of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simply indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only treatable, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and poisons the stomach, putting it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time the delicate but vital organ becomes diseased. Dr. J. C. Mebane, of Hillsboro, N. C., says: "I have cured many cases of heart trouble and I can tell you that it is not the heart, but the stomach, which is the cause of it."
