GRAHAM, N. C., April 27, 1911.

It now looks like the Mexican revolution is nearing the end. President Diaz may abdicate, but that is not certain, however there is much opposition to him.

The dynamiters of the Los Angeles, Cal. Times newspaper building last October, when twenty-one men were killed, are about to be brought to justice. John J. and James B. McManara and O. E. McManal, the leaders, it is believed are in jail.

For the U. S. Senate there are, it is said, three avowed candidates in the field, namely, Senator Simmons, to succeed himself, Chief Justice Walter Clark and Gov. W. W. Kitchin. Ex-Gov. Aycock will come out if the people want him, so he says, or words to that effect.

The good roads movement in this state is going forward. The sentiment has grown wonderfully in the past few years. The people are waking up to the fact that time is money, and that when it comes to getting from one place to another in the country a good road more than makes up what is lacking in the conveyance or team.

Senators Overman and Simmons will retain their committee assignments—the former on appropriations and judiciary and the latter on finance and commerce. They are on other committees, some of which they will give up and retain some. But they are on four big committees of the U. S. Senate, and are not excelled by any other two members of the Senate. By long service and ability they have won their way to the front.

The farmer's free list in the bill before Congress is being assailed bitterly by the Republicans. That party does not seem to recognize the fact that the farmer is as much entitled to relief under our tariff laws as any other class of our citizens. The farmers know they are. They have found out something, and that they have is what is disturbing the Republican leaders. It means that the future success of the Republican party is being put in jeopardy, because that party has long retained power by making the farmers believe they were special beneficiaries in the tariff.

A deaf but pious old lady visiting a small country church carried with her an ear trumpet. The elders had never seen one, and viewed it with suspicion and uneasiness. After a short consultation one of them went up to the lady just before the opening of the service, and wagging his finger at her, warningly, whispered, "One foot and you're out."

Big Nest of Eggs.

One hundred and forty fresh eggs in one nest is the extraordinary record of Mr. John P. Carlton's hens last week. The hens were thought to be falling short of their duty when an investigation in the barnyard revealed the fact that they were laying in one nest.—Lenoir Topic.

Washington Letter

WASHINGTON, April 22, 1911.

Other cities like San Francisco and New Orleans may contend for the prize of an international exposition lasting from May to November, but the capital of the United States is in a perpetual state of exposition and growing more interesting year after year. As transportation facilities improve, as population grows, as wealth increases, Washington becomes more and more attractive and more and more the Mecca of hundreds of thousands of pilgrims. During the past week the Daughters of the American Revolution were in session at the beautiful temple facing the plaza south of the White House. The President addressed them in language which flattery and irony vied with each other, but so deftly veiled that it is doubtful if the dear ladies knew all he was thinking. It is as good as comic opera to see this convention in full session, the stage banked with flowers and flowers bedecking the monstrous hats of two thousand ladies in the audience, beautiful maiden pages in beautiful gowns moving about on the stage and through the halls, everything suggestive of elegance, wealth and vanity. The roll call resurrects the names of Mrs. Martha Washington, Mrs. Lucy Jefferson, Abigail Warren, Lucretia Hamilton and many other names that carry one back to that golden period of our history when, since the historical school books do not say otherwise, everybody was patriotic, honest and good. Well, long live illusion and down with hobbie skirts.

Another convention, the American Academy of Sciences, is in session in the new National Museum. A lecture on the ocean was delivered by Sir John Murray, of Glasgow, Scotland, last night in which he told some of the results of the Challenger expedition in 1859 in which he was commander. The afternoon session was enlivened by seven papers on astronomical subjects. The subject of infantile paralysis was treated by Dr. Flexner, who has become famous for his connection with the Rockefeller Medical Institution.

This is the third week of Congress and the Democrats are congratulating themselves on what they have accomplished and what they are expecting to do if it takes them all summer. Speaker Clark is making an effort to reform the manners of the House of Representatives and he has smashed two hard wood gavels in the cause. There are other gavels, however, in his locker, and the country no doubt wishes him success and will give him credit for his effort whether he succeeds or not. Visitors to Washington who are so fortunate as to go into the House gallery are always surprised at the confusion and noise on the floor. Members of Congress are talking, writing, smoking, joking and moving about on the floor and it is almost impossible to hear the member who is trying to make a speech. In the midst of such confusion, no one wonders that a member some years ago made himself famous by saying "Mr. Speaker, where was I?" The present speaker of the House was no doubt a member of a debating society when he was a little boy, and recollects what beautiful order was maintained there and how much better they knew and practiced parliamentary etiquette than they do in the debating society over which he now presides. He is now insisting that parliamentary forms must be respected by Congressmen who desire to interrupt the orator who has the floor.

New Military Invention Prevents Leaking of War Secrets.

New York: Through an ingenious invention of Patrick B. Delany, the New England inventor, Uncle Sam has found the means he has been long seeking of preventing foreign spies from tapping government wires and learning the secrets of the army, navy and state departments in time of peace or war. In the presence of prominent representatives of the army and navy and distinguished scientists on Sunday last a demonstration of the invention, which possessed an added interest because of the frequent re-invention of future trouble with Japan and the uncertain conditions prevailing along the Mexican border, was made under the joint auspices of the New York World and the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

For half an hour messages were exchanged by the military men and scientists present in the two newspaper offices 1060 miles apart. In their judgment, the invention solves one of the most important military problems with which an army has had to contend ever since the introduction of the telegraph as an auxiliary of modern warfare.

The invention, which is the latest work of Delany, who is the inventor of the Telepost automatic telegraph system, and multiplex, the anti-page relay and other improvements to the telegraph and cable. It breaks up the dots and dashes forming the letters of the telegraph code and required the use of two circuits, traversing widely separated territory. One went to St. Louis by way of Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Columbus, Indianapolis and Terre Haute and the other by the way of Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, Toledo, and Chicago.

The two wires were controlled and operated from an ordinary single Morse key and the message was received over a single receiver at the end of its journey in the same way as a regular communication. Each alternate dot or dash travelled over one wire and the other dots and dashes over the other. Though the distance by way of one route was hundreds of miles longer than that of the other, each impulse reached the receiving instrument in its proper sequence. By tapping either wire all that the secret service agent of any enemy would have gotten from it would have been a series of meaningless cabalistics of no value to him. Parting company at the sending key the two parts of the message, separated by many miles throughout their flight across country were reunited at the receiver, rendering the tapping of either wire during the transit of the message of no use whatsoever.

The mechanical device that accomplishes this is very simple, requires no special skill to operate, and can be used in any combination of two circuits of which the telegraph is susceptible. It makes the coding of confidential government messages unnecessary, thus saving hours of valuable time in periods of urgency when minutes are vital to the success of a movement and will defy the ingenuity of a foe to extract form the wires anything that can be made of service or profit to it, Delany presided at the demonstration in the World office on this end, where it was witnessed by Hudson Maxim, General A. R. Burdette, U. S. A. former Chief of Ordnance; Commander J. W. Oman, U. S. N. representing Admiral Lutzke, commander of the Brooklyn Navy Yard; Midshipman W. A. Richardson, U. S. N. representing Admiral Seton Schroeder, of the Atlantic fleet now in port and other officers of the army and navy.

In the Post-Dispatch office were Colonel W. A. Mann, U. S. A. and Captain H. S. H. Ford, U. S. A. of Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis. "We've got the enemy bottled up this time!" said General Burdette, "when the demonstration was over." The day of stealing our dispatches is now over, thank God.

Lieut. C. A. Boone Lives at Elon College.

During the Civil War a Bible was found by a Federal soldier and he wants to return it to the owner. The story in regard to it appeared in the News and Observer of 26th inst., and is as follows:

"Charles E. LeGrand who says he was late musician of the 13th infantry and the First frontier cavalry of the Union forces, has written from his home in Salem, Mass., to the adjutant general of North Carolina, informing him that a friend of his has a Bible he would like to return to the proper person. The writer says that his friend picked it up during the Civil War at New Bern and now wishes to return it to its owner or to some relative of his.

On the fly leaf of the Bible was written the name of Lieut. C. A. Boone, of Company D, of the 35th North Carolina regiment. Camp Morgan, December 16th. It was presented to him by Mrs. C. K. Caldwell. On several pages of the Bible was written the name of "Frances McKinly," which leads to the suggestion of a possible romance.

The records show that Lieut. Charles A. Boone entered the Confederate service in 1861, as second lieutenant of Company D, 35th N. C., from Chatham County. He served under Capt. Hardy J. Lassiter, who was killed in the battle of Malvern Hill. The next captain was Capt. Robert E. Petty, who in 1864, was promoted to major. In 1863 Lieut. Boone became First Lieutenant of his company. Whether he is still alive is not known. The records do not show him to be a pensioner.

Adjutant General Leinster says he will be glad for anyone knowing anything about Lieut. Boone or his relatives to communicate with either him or Mr. LeGrand, in Salem, Mass.

One morning last week Mr. A. C. Reeves, of Biltmore, went to feed his pigs and found two small white boys in the pen asleep with the pigs. The boys told a pitiful story, saying they were orphans and homeless, and were given money to buy food. It turned out that they live in Haywood county and their father, learning of their whereabouts, took them home. They were hobbing.

John Bolton, the 13-year old son of District Attorney Bolton, is in the hospital in Winston with a crushed skull, the result of being hit with a rock by a negro boy last week, and his condition is regarded as very serious.

Young Bolton was in a wagon with another boy, Austin Newsum, and the negro threw at him, hitting Bolton instead. Young Bolton, in October, 1909, was accidentally shot by his brother, Frank, the wound being so serious that his leg was amputated and for awhile his life was despaired of.
