

Don't Suffer!

"I had been troubled, a little, for nearly 7 years," writes Mrs. L. Fincher, in a letter from Peavy, Ala., "but I was not taken down, until March, when I went to bed and had to have a doctor. He did all he could for me, but I got no better. I hurt all over, and I could not rest. At last, I tried Cardui, and soon I began to improve. Now I am in very good health, and able to do all my household work."

TAKE THE CARDUI Women's Tonic

You may wonder why Cardui is so successful, after other remedies have failed. The answer is that Cardui is successful, because it is composed of scientific ingredients, that act curatively on the womanly system. It is a medicine for women, and for women only. It builds, strengthens, and restores weak and ailing women, to health and happiness.

If you suffer like Mrs. Fincher did, take Cardui. It will surely do for you, what it did for her. At all druggists.

HUMUS IN THE SOIL.

Called Most Stable Form of Organic Matter Known.

Regarding the value of humus as such Professor Milton Whitney, chief of the United States bureau of soils, makes the following statement in United States Farmers' Bulletin 257:

"We have studied the effect of humus in the growth of plants. We have found that humus extracted from our cultivated soils is innocuous to the plant. It is apparently neither beneficial nor deleterious. Humus is a very stable form of organic matter. It remains in the soil for years. It may be exposed to extremes of heat and cold, but still the black color of a black soil will persist. It is much more stable than wood. It is this humus that wood or wood fiber is converted if it is incorporated in a finely divided condition in the soil and goes to an end product—that is, if it goes into its most stable form. I really believe that humus, next to coal, is the most stable form of organic matter that we know of, and if you think this over you will agree with me that when organic matter is converted into humus it is as thoroughly preserved as any organic matter we have in nature."

Of course, says Practical Farmer, this refers to the value of humus as a source of plant food and not to its physical value. By excessive tillage and the use of caustic lime the further decay of this old humus can be effected or hastened, and thus some plant food can be secured from true humus; but, as a rule, the use of farm manure or legume crops as green manure will be more profitable, especially in terms of permanent soil improvement.

Under the United States patent laws the owner of a patent is entitled to the exclusive right to manufacture and sell the patented article, and the making of such articles by another person, even though for his own use, constitutes an infringement of the patent.

Judge Lewis of the United States district court at Denver has decided that a defunct insurance company can not legally collect assessments. He holds that an insurance company which comes into Colorado and writes policies without first giving up to the laws of the state cannot collect in the federal court.

The Missouri court of appeals recently rendered a decision of value to shippers of live stock. W. L. Green shipped a carload of mules from North English, Ia., to Central, Mo., and one mule died a short time after being loaded. Green brought suit against the Milwaukee and Wabash railroads and the circuit court of Boone county decided that he was entitled to damages. On appeal to the higher court, this judgment was affirmed against both roads, the court holding that as both roads shared in the profits of the shipment they were jointly responsible for any injury sustained.

UDO, A NEW VEGETABLE.

Introduced Here From Japan and Called Better Than Asparagus.

Writing in the National Geographic Magazine on "New Plant Immigrants," David Fairchild says the following of udo, a Japanese vegetable similar to asparagus:

"On the streets of any Japanese city you will find for sale an attractive bleached vegetable called udo. It is a plant in New England the asparagus, but a much larger plant. There are many ways in which it is prepared by Japanese and the foreigners who live in Japan, but either as a salad or cooked in the same way in which asparagus is cooked it deserves to rank as one of the important vegetables of the world. It is easy to grow; it does not require replanting often than once in nine or ten years; it can be cropped in the autumn or in the spring, and it yields large crops of shoots, which are often two feet long and an inch or more in diameter at the base. These bright white shoots are edible to their very bases without the least objectionable fiber and not in this respect like asparagus, of which only the tips are fit to eat."

"You cannot introduce a new vegetable to the world," said a botanical authority to Mr. Fairchild. Mr. Fairchild says that the introduction of a new vegetable is a long undertaking, extending perhaps over the period of a generation, but it should not be left out of account, as the means at our disposal today are immeasurably more powerful than they were even two decades ago. The advent of the great hotels and the sympathetic interest of the great magazines are two elements which today make possible what yesterday would have been impossible.

FINE FOR ODD JOBS.

Take Your Little House With You When You Work About the Farm.

For many jobs in the fall and winter a portable house to use as a shelter will be of great advantage. The same idea may be applied to a pen for use in the field or for a portable house for chickens or turkeys to be moved about the farm. In fact, the same building may be applied to all three purposes with success.

Build the floor the size you wish and make it as strong as possible. Slightly back from the center an axle is placed which can be made of a 4 by 4 scantling and fitted with two old wheels for moving the house. A short tongue is placed on one end, which is fastened behind a wagon when moving the building. Under the tongue a block is placed when it is desired to use the building upon wheels, as in husking corn in the fields in cold weather.

The building is erected above the floor, and if for extra hauling to keep out the rain, with a small bench built at one end for the stalks to lie upon, with hooks for strings. This makes it a comfortable working place as can be desired, and with the advantage that it can be moved from one end of the field to the other as needed.

Where built for a third purpose the walls should be made of light boards or at least the lower part of walls and the roof of light lumber or canvas. When used as a pen for hens or fowls it is moved to the proper place and the wheels removed, thus raising the building on the axle, and by replacing wheels it can again be moved to a new location, as desired.—American Agriculturist.

A GOAL FOR THE FARMER.

Every farmer should work out and adopt a permanent system of agriculture under which he can increase and maintain the fertility of his land, enjoy a good living, rise in social value, and wield a good influence in his community.

Poultry Pickings.

Darkening the nests is one way to prevent the egg eating habit.

Earthen water fountains in the poultry yard are better than tin ones. The former will keep the water cooler in summer and warmer in winter.

It is an old saying "that too much care will kill a cat," and it is also true of chickens. While there is certain daily work to be done, it is not necessary to coddle the chicks and try to be with them all the time.

A hen in the best laying condition has some surplus fat on her body. This means that her bodily wants have been supplied, and there is some to spare. A very fat hen seldom lays well. A poor hen cannot lay well.

An average of 150 eggs per hen during the first year of laying is fairly good laying. Pullet in good health and vigor should average this number of eggs. During the second year they will lay about 25 per cent fewer eggs and such succeeding year correspondingly fewer.
