

Bad Spells

"I suffered, during girlhood, from womanly weakness," writes Mrs. Mollie Navy, of Walnut, N. C. "At last, I was almost bed-ridden, and had to give up. We had three doctors. All the time, I was getting worse. I had bad spells, that lasted from 7 to 28 days. In one week, after I gave Cardui a trial, I could eat, sleep, and joke, as well as anybody. In 8 weeks, I was well. I had been an invalid for 5 weary years! Cardui relieved me, when everything else failed."

POULTRY NOTES BY C.M. BARNITZ, RIVERSIDE, PA.

Who was it on our wedding day? Held back the tears and made us gay And hugged us when we went away? My mother-in-law.

Who watched by baby's crib all night When death our spirits did fright? Who nursed our darling through all right? My mother-in-law.

Who is it when the children cry Just smiles and looks them in the eye And they quick get as good as pie? My mother-in-law.

Who shares with us when times are bad? Who laughs with us when we are glad? Who weeps with us when we are sad? My mother-in-law.

Who'll have a mansion over there? Who'll have a heavenly robe so fair? Who'll have an angel's crown to wear? My mother-in-law.

Don't feed moist sprouted oats. A little salt in the sprinkling water will prevent mold and make the sprouts more palatable.

Don't forget that the winter grain ration is more concentrated and richer than the summer range bill of fare, with its delightful exercise in fresh air.

THE MASH MIXER. Most mash is in a egg puller, but when it must be mixed by hand for a big flock that's tireless work, and, besides, the ground grains are difficult to blend by hand. If you have ever tried to mix corn, oats, wheat and barley in a barrel with a shovel with all your exertion you found before the barrel was half empty that the grain was not half mixed. Check feed ditto.

Necessity was the mother of invention with the poultryman who got out the mixing machine. Its revolving paddles quickly blend grain or by-products perfectly, and when run by engine the poultryman has a snap.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS. United States Commissioner of Education Claxton is advocating a system of agricultural training for all the public schools in this country. If it continues the distinction between town and "country" Rube will be obliterated, and all will belong to the Ancient and Honorable Order of Hayseeds.

State departments of agriculture are beginning to lay stress on turkey culture and are sending out turkey lecturers to the farmers' institutes. Lecturers skilled in the art are few, and they find few turkey breeders to talk to. This is a real case of locking the door after the turkey has elapsed.

Salty cornmeal dough is the latest sparrow exterminator. Bait them in the winter when they are hungry, but the dope so poultry and useful birds can't get it.

City consumers do not get many fresh winter eggs because town private trade gobblers them. City people, more and more, are making quiet contacts with egg farmers to furnish their egg supplies and thus get a bon ton article the whole year round.

York by a delegation of farmers who presented before him a co-operative scheme whereby the middlemen should be done away with and farm products be handed direct from farmer to consumer. They showed New York consumers paid $90,000,000 for potatoes, $1,125,000 for the farmer but $8,500,000, $9,125,000 for middlemen that brought him but $1,800,000 and $49,000,000 for milk that netted him but $23,000,000. A big bunch of New York middlemen are now serving time for their light gentry methods in buying and selling poultry.

THE FOOLS AIN'T ALL DEAD YET. You kin inspect all the graveyards. You kin hunt through human history. With all its strange variety. But of that's kicked the bucket I've a big wad to bet That you'll holler "fore you're through the job." "The fools ain't all dead yet!" "I am self made," boasts one of them. It's true, and what a job! He really and he truly looks Just like a self made man. He wasn't made in Germany. On that you're safe to bet. Crow on, you self made rooster, "The fools ain't all dead yet!" "My ancestor," says number two, "came from a line of kings. We ain't a bit related to you ordinary things." Oh, Johnny, run and get your gun and shoot this bird real quick! He looks like some I've often seen a-tyin' up the creek. But if you knock him in the head here's the long green to bet— You'll find the woods will fall 'em. "The fools ain't all dead yet!" "This world is gettin' worse," now we hear from number three. "The people are unsanctified except the Lord and me." Oh, say, you long faced Pharisee, go out and chew your hay! Some, these wags will get your share while you stand round and brag. When Peter turns you down below to husband the coal and sweat. You'll find the fools are not all there— "The fools ain't all dead yet!" C. M. BARNITZ.

DECORATIVE VALUE OF STREET LIGHTING.

The Various Systems and Their Adaptability to Certain Conditions.

One of the practical advantages of the electric lamp is its ability to operate equally well in both upright and pendent positions, says a writer in the American City. The cluster system, which consists of suitable posts supporting a number of lamps, has acquired great popularity, and justly so, the multiple light sources giving a distinctively decorative appearance. A very common arrangement and one to be particularly recommended in smaller cities is the use of four lamps supported on arms, with a lamp in the center, the latter being arranged on a separate circuit so that it can be used for service after midnight or whatever hour the other lamps may be considered unnecessary. The central lamp necessarily must be placed in the upright position, and the globe should be of larger diameter than those on the arms. Whether the lamps on the separate circuit be pendent or upright is principally a matter of taste, although there is some slight gain in illumination on the sidewalk by placing the lamps pendent and thus avoiding the shadow of the arms.

The capacity or size of the lamps will depend on the distance apart of the standards. In all cases, however, the conduits should have an ample margin of safety, so that in case larger lamps are desired at any time they may be safely used.

The width of the street must also be taken into account. The lower post is more suitable for the narrow street, and vice versa. The usual heights are from twelve to fourteen feet for cluster posts, the exact height being determined by the individual conditions. The various types of arc lamps, being of much greater diameter, being naturally require much higher posts, ranging from twenty feet for the inclosed arc to forty feet or even more for the flaming arc.

Exterior lighting, like interior lighting, must be carried out with due consideration of the environment and its chief purpose sought. A wholly satisfactory result can be obtained only when all the conditions are carefully considered and given due weight. Modern illuminants have made possible a degree of beauty and utility in public lighting that was unattainable even a half century ago. We are only beginning to realize what this means in the development of the city of the twentieth century. The means of producing light in unlimited quantities is one of the few benefits bestowed upon modern civilization by science that cannot be perverted to evil purposes. It is one of the few good things of which there is no danger of getting too much.
