FOLEY'S KIDNEY PILLS For Backache, Stomach and Bladder

Senator Overman has been appointed a member of a congressional commission which will investigate the various proposed plans for Federal aid to good roads for the purpose of reporting to the next session of Congress a comprehensive policy of Federal aid to road building.

Senator Overman was the first Senator to introduce a bill providing for Federal aid for road development, following the adoption of the Democratic platform at Baltimore, which declared in favor of such a policy. His bill met with general favor on both sides of the Senate.

THE THREE GUARDSMEN BY ALEXANDRE DUMAS

CHAPTER XXX. A Terrible Vision. THE cardinal leaped his elbow on his mantle, his cheek upon his hand and looked intently at the young man for a moment. No one had a more searching eye than the Cardinal de Richelieu, and D'Artagnan felt this glance penetrate his veins like a fever.

The Cardinal looked intently at the young man for a moment.

that time many things had happened to you. You were walking one day behind the Chateaux when it would have been better for you if you had been elsewhere. Then you took with your friends a journey to the waters of Forges. They stopped on the road, but you continued your way. That is all very simple. You had business in England.

"You are brave, M. d'Artagnan," continued his eminence. "You are prudent, which is still better. I like men of head and heart. But you have powerful enemies if you do not take great heed they will destroy you!"

"What do you desire of me?" cried the cardinal, with astonishment. "I am in his majesty's guard, monseigneur, and I have no reason to be dissatisfied."

"But it appears to me that my majesty is also in his majesty's guard, and who ever serves in a French corps serves the king."

You. Come, react and decide. "Your goodness confounds me, monseigneur," replied D'Artagnan, "but since monseigneur permits me to speak freely I will presume to say that all my friends are in the king's musketeers and guards, and, by an inevitable fatality, all my enemies are in the service of your eminence."

"Well, well!" said the cardinal, "I don't wish you any ill, but you must be aware that it is quite trouble enough to defend and reward our friends. We owe nothing to our enemies; and let me give you a piece of advice. Take good care of yourself, M. d'Artagnan, for from the moment I withdraw my hand from you I would not give a penny for your life."

"The whole of the next day was spent in preparations for departure and the night farwell. At the first sound of the morning trumpet the friends separated, the musketeers hastening to the hotel of M. de Treville, the guards to that of M. Desseaux. Each of the captains then led his company to the Louvre, where the king passed them in review."

"The two men followed the company and at leaving the Faubourg St. Antoine mounted two horses. CHAPTER XXXI. The Siege of La Rochelle.

The siege of La Rochelle was one of the great political events of the reign of Louis XIII, and one of the great military enterprises of the cardinal. Of the important cities given up by Henry IV. to the Huguenots as places of safety there only remained La Rochelle. It became necessary, therefore, to destroy this last bulwark of Calvinism."

The Count de Torse entered into the citadel St. Martin with his garrison and threw a hundred men into a little fort, called the fort of La Pre.

dispose of or march toward the theater of war. It was of this detachment, the musketeer vanguard, that our friend D'Artagnan formed a part. The king, as we have said, was to follow as soon as his bed of justice had been held; but on rising from his bed of justice on the 28th of June he felt himself attacked by fever. He was unable to stand, anxious to set out, but his illness becoming more serious, he was forced to stop at Ville-roi.

"He threw himself upon the ground. At the same instant the gun was fired, and he heard the whistling of a ball pass over his head. No time was to be lost. D'Artagnan sprang up with a bound, and at the same instant the ball from the other musketeer tore up the stones near him."

"At 9 o'clock next morning the drums beat to arms. The Duke of Orleans, the Duke of Montpensier, mounted along the front of the line. Then all the superior officers approached him to pay their compliments. At the expiration of a minute or two M. Desseaux made D'Artagnan a sign to come to him. He left the ranks advanced to receive his orders."

"Four men of good will who will risk being killed with me," said D'Artagnan, "I have chosen for myself."

The Koreans are said to be the greatest eaters in the world. To eat is an honor in Korea, and the merit of a feast consists not so much in the quality as in the quantity of the food served. Little conversation occurs during the Korean meal, for the diners are too intent on consuming what are before them. Eating matches are common. It is said.

MRS. TOM'S PART IN THE ELECTION

Governor Marshall's Wife Has the Memory for Names. ROMANCE OF THEIR LIVES

The Notification of the Indiana Executive For Democratic Vice Presidential Honors a Record Breaker.

By J. C. HAMMOND, Of Democratic National Publicity Bureau.

Indianapolis—Just about the time that thousands of friends of Governor Thomas Riley Marshall were anxiously waiting to shake his hand in congratulation on his acceptance as candidate for vice president on the Democratic ticket, a smiling woman stepped before him, and if one could have heard what she whispered in his ear it would have been something like "Now, hurry in, Tom, and change your clothes."

greeted Governor Marshall in the big coliseum in the state fair grounds, Indianapolis, on Tuesday were the greatest in the history of the party. The west wanted to show the east what could be done in notification honors, and while Mrs. Marshall was happy, of course, over the honors for her husband, she was also worried for her husband comes mighty close to being father, husband, son and partner all in one. And when a woman has that combination on her hands to care for she has every right to be worried.

Governor Marshall will never gain any honors as a hammer thrower. He is not built that way. While all the country was reading the vigorous words of Governor Marshall which told the voters what he expects Democracy to do in carrying out the pledges for the next four years, it's worth while to know what part a woman is taking in the affairs of the campaign—how Tom Marshall happens to be in the position in which he stands today.

Meeting Mrs. Marshall. After the death of his parents Governor Marshall, dived deeper into his law practice, and one day an urgent case took him to Atgona, Ind. His duties called him to the county clerk's office, where he met Miss Lois Kinsey, daughter of the county clerk, who was assisting her father in the office.

some five or six weeks of his time. "Now, I did not want to be starting off like that," Governor Marshall explained to a friend one day, "so I just told Mrs. Marshall that I thought she should go along. And she did."

Since then Governor Marshall has never made a trip without Mrs. Marshall going along. They have traveled all over the country together; they go to banquets and political meetings together with the friends of the Indiana executive refer to him and his wife as the "parads."

"When he gets into a political battle he forgets his weakness. He gives all that is in him, and that will tell on any man. Mrs. Marshall soon discovered that the governor would become heated in making a speech and the next day his voice would be husky. She decided that he had better give up some of the handshaking and take care of his health first. So when you find him making a speech, when he has finished, he goes to Mrs. Marshall for the applause of the audience. Rather, he hurries to his room and changes his clothing."

"Home Air" Prevails. The Marshall home is typical of the mistress. It is a home of books, and still one does not feel "bookish." One of the Marshall friends said he always felt like entering when he entered the Marshall home in Columbus City or the executive mansion at Indianapolis. Mrs. Marshall believes in a home first, and the "home air" prevails.

"I Governor Marshall ever occupied the White House people would not know that historic institution," declares an admirer. "Mrs. Marshall would have felt a real home. People would feel comfortable even in the midst of the gold and glitter."

While the governor is shaking hands and trying to remember whether his caller is Jones or Smith, Mrs. Marshall is busy supplying the information and asking about all the relatives. Governor Marshall has no brothers or sisters, and his parents being dead leaves him somewhat barren of relatives.

The divided Republican party is like the "loy" blowing against the wind. There will be a lot of bluster, but it will not take votes away from Wilson and Marshall. Having exhausted his supply of adjectives in denouncing Taft, Roosevelt is now leading a campaign of denunciation of every one who does not agree with himself.

MRS. MARSHALL.

Mrs. Marshall is not satisfied with her domestic duties alone. She wants to do her share in problems of the political and business world. Mrs. Marshall is said to have discussed in detail with her husband his actions on the Baltimore convention, and when it was over that Marshall was the man who was going to go on the ticket with Wilson he wanted to know what his wife thought about it.

When Governor Marshall and his wife were about to be married she decided that her last official act of the office would be to make out the marriage license. Governor Marshall accompanied his wife to the county clerk's office and attached her with care as she noted the records in the big book and filled out the license and watched her as she carefully signed her father's name, with her own as deputy.

Mrs. Marshall, having blotted the ink, said, "Now we can go." "Not yet," laughed Governor Marshall. "Why, we are all fixed," explained Mrs. Marshall, pointing to the license. "Yes, but I have to pay for it," replied the governor. "It's all right for you to make it out, but it's up to me to pay the fee." And she did.

Mrs. Marshall is a keen student, and, having established the practice of going with her husband on all his trips, be they short or long, they make it a point to carry along some book. Mrs. Marshall is as much of a humanitarian as the governor. A glance at some of the bills that have been passed by the 1911 Indiana legislature gives an insight into the governor: To curtail child labor. To regulate sale of cold storage products. To require hygienic schoolhouses and medical examination of children.
