

THE GLEANER

ISSUED EVERY THURSDAY. J. D. KERNOLLE, Editor. $1.00 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

Secretary Bryan spoke the latter part of last week in both Asheville and Hendersonville. In a speech at the latter place he claimed it to be legitimate for him to lecture for pay when so doing did not interfere with his official duties.

News is that at the conference in Raleigh Tuesday between the railroad and State officials an agreement was almost reached. Another, and perhaps the last, will be held next Tuesday at Old Point Comfort.

Goldboro Contractor Whips Six Soldiers.

Cor. of The News and Observer. Morehead City, July 14.—J. W. Jones, a Goldboro contractor, taught a half dozen soldiers a lesson yesterday that they will not soon forget.

Mr. Jones came down to Morehead City yesterday to enjoy a dip in the ocean, accompanied by his wife, and while in bathing a soldier approached Mrs. Jones, who was alone at the time and asked her to take a swim with him.

Mrs. Jones refused his request, whereupon the soldier grabbed her by the arms, and tried by force, to take her in the water, it is alleged.

Mrs. Jones screamed and at this juncture Mr. Jones appeared upon the scene and demanded of the soldier that he release Mrs. Jones, stating that she was his wife, and he would not submit to her being thus insulted.

Going over to the bath house the soldier gathered five of his comrades, and immediately returned to where Mr. Jones was standing on the beach and renewed the trouble, striking him on the side of the head, and then for about ten minutes it seemed as though a cyclone had struck the beach.

Mr. Jones was none the worse off as a result of the fight other than a small scratch on the side of his face. Eye witnesses of the affray say it was the greatest fight they ever saw a lone man put up against such odds, all six of the soldiers receiving a severe drubbing.

HOME MERCHANT SHOULD NEVER HAVE DULL TIMES

Nothing wins so well as constant work. Often we hear a merchant complaining about dull times. Perhaps he is doing a rushing business, for the simple reason that his neighbor keeps busy. If customers are not coming in so rapidly as he might wish, he can take time to get busier and devise some new schemes to bring trade to the store.

There is always lots of work to do. How many times do we find the man who says there is nothing to do looking at a display of fifty goods? Don't you forget it—if you have any business to look after you have something to keep you busy all the time. Nothing like keeping busy about the store. It is sure to pay in the end.

Improving the Whole State. University of Illinois Takes Unique Method to Reach Public. The University of Illinois has been sending out an "Agricultural Bulletin" for many years, which the following ten items are listed opposite squares to be checked after the reading "I WILL" and returned to the university:

Plant or improve my windbreak; screen unsightly objects; save old trees on lawn, roadside and practice how to attract friendly birds; plant bushes and vines against foundations of my house; make a good open lawn; improve views of my house and the prairie; help the children make a flower garden; plant a border sacred to native flowers; plant my home grounds. Without agreeing to pay anything I seriously desire help on the above matters, and if I get it I will tell you what improvements I make and the cost.

University of Illinois is also sending an active campaign for planting of all roadsides with trees and has a department for that special work under the leadership of Wilhel Miller, Ph. D., assistant professor of landscape horticulture.

Favors Young Sows. Experienced Hog Raiser Believes Glits Also Best Litters. The contrast between glits and aged sows has often been dwelt upon, writes G. P. Williams in the Ohio Farmer. The man who has a bunch of glits is too often the boy who has a bunch of aged sows, and his prejudices are thoroughly aroused, and he does not expect much luck with the young sows.

When young sows are to be wintered with the old ones they get ready for the realization of your fears. Glits will be driven from the trough from the corn and will be thoroughly covered so as to be peevish and ill nourished. Glits should be fed differently from old sows. They cannot stand heavy feeding and do well. They need growth instead of fat. They need exercise. They do not like to be crowded together as before, fed with moderation and a food designed for growth, by far the more quiet and careful than the old ones.

Five years ago we had spring litters from glits only, wintered together with no old sows. We had better averages at farrowing time than ever since. This spring we had a litter weighing 300 pounds or even less. The next two or three litters are possibly as good. After that the pork barrel is a better place for most old sows than is the farrowing pen.

Store on Clover. Cattle receiving a lot of grain can be run on red clover pasture without great danger of loss from bloating, cattle not receiving grain on clover pasture are never entirely free from this danger. writes F. O. King, Purdue experiment station, in the Breeders Gazette. Losses from bloating are nevertheless almost eliminated by taking the necessary precautions. Some dry roughage should be kept accessible to the cattle at all times. The cattle should not be turned on pasture for the first time while the clover is wet with dew or rain. They should also be full of dry roughage so they will not eat too greedily of the green clover.

Pasture for Calves. Calves ought to have a pasture for their special use. It must have good water, plenty of high ground and some dense shade where they may retreat from flies and sleep a portion of every day. Because, like all young things, they need more sleep than adult animals. The pasture must be fenced so as to keep the calves in and other stock out. If at any time they are to be turned into richer feed caution must be used that they are not injured by it. An hour or two the first day and slowly increasing the time each day, is the wise course. Fortunately calves and young cattle are subject to but few diseases, and may be raised at a good profit by the use of a little common sense.

Remarkable Story Concerning a Captured Flag.

Capt. J. D. Irwin of Co. A, 20th North Carolina Infantry writes the Durham Herald as follows: "There is a story of a returned flag going the rounds in the papers in which there are many errors. The facts are these: On the first day's fighting at Gettysburg the 20th N. C. Regiment went into the battle with a new flag. The flag bearer was C. A. Patterson of Company A. We had a hard fight for awhile, our flag was captured with a number of our men. Later in the day we drove the enemy through the town took a lot of prisoners and on one of the prisoners we found half of our flag, it being torn in two, from corner to corner. This half has a number of bullet holes in it, and it is now in Concord, N. C.

On the first day of the reunion at Gettysburg while walking through the camp I heard a veteran from New York inquiring for the 20th N. C. I introduced myself to him, and after talking for a while he asked me if I lost our flag on the first day. I told him we lost it but later recaptured one-half of it. He slapped me on the shoulder and said, "Old fellow I have the other half." I invited him to my tent and we had a long talk. He said he would send me the flag when he got home. His name is Henry M. Fitzgerald, 97th New York Volunteers, now living in Chicago. So I hope to reunite our flag soon."
