Lesson IV.—Third Quarter, For July 26, 1914.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xix, 11-27.
Memory Verses 16, 17—Golden Text, Matt. xxv, 21—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The introduction to this parable of the pounds (verses 11, 12) seems to me most unmistakably clear concerning the postponement of the kingdom, They thought that it would immediately appear, and they had reason to think so, for John the Baptist and the Lord Jesus and the twelve and the seventy had all proclaimed it as at hand (Matt. ili, 2; iv, 17; x, 7; Luke

Lord and the twelve and the seventy indicated the coming of the kingdom. But when the rulers rejected the Messiah, the King, and determined to kill Him, that led to the unfolding of the Him, that led to the unfolding of the present age of a rejected Christ, a "Well, my man," said the general, now many years' service have you scattered israel and a postponed king.

His servants with pounds and talents to use in His absence and give an account of at His return, and their I have seen with such length of serv-position in His kingdom will depend upon their faithfulness in His absence.

That the kingdom will come at His "Well, my man," said the general, "how many years' service have you got?" "Nineteen years," repeated the general, "well, my man," said the general, "how many years' service have you got?" I have seen with such length of services who did not possess even one good upon their faithfulness in His absence. "And you sir," came the scathing upon their faithfulness in his absence.

That the kingdom will come at His return is also plainly stated in Acts reply, "are the first general I have ill, 21, where we read that the heavens seen who did not possess even one have received Him until the times of war medal!"

ill, 21, where we read that the heavens seen who did not possess even one have received Him until the times of the restoration of all things of which the prophets have spoken.

In the story of the talents in Matt. xxv. which should be studied with this lesson, there is also an account of the far country, the goods intrusted to the servants and the reckoning at the Master's return. While in each see. Master's return. While in each record we read of pounds and talents given to His servants to use, we read that some were wicked and slothful and finally found their place among the lost, so we must conclude that He gives opportunity to all who profess to be His servants to prove whether they really are so or not. No real serv-In the lesson on the pounds He gave the same to each, but in that on the talents He gave according to their abilanother one. The pound given to each may represent the Spirit given to every one to profit withal (I Cor. xii, 7). The Spirit spoke wondrously through Balaam, and we have no reason to doubt that Judas Iscariot did not do wonder like the others, yet neither were true orange servants. The talents may refer to the special gifts of the Spirit, given variusitor. ously and in different measure, as He may see fit (I Cor. xii, 8-11). may see fit (I Cor. xii, 8-11).

The first step is to receive the Lord Jesus as Zaccheus did and thus obtain salvation as the free gift of God (Luke xix, 1-10; Rom, vi. 23; John i. 12; iii. 16; Rev. xxii, 17), then, having become a child of God, live to serve the living and true God while we wait for His Son from heaven (I Thess. 1, 9, 10; Son from heaven (I The Tit. ii, 11-13; Rom. v, 1, 2).

Tit. ii, 11-18; Rom. v, 1, 2).

I am continually glad that He has appointed all our service, prepared all our good works beforehand, and that He only expects us to minister as of the ability which He giveth, bidling ourselves ready for any manner of service and wholly at His commandment (Eph. ii, 10; I Pet. iv, 11; I Chron. xxviii, 21).

I am also glad that it is God who worketh in us both to will and to do worketh in us both to will and to do of His good pleasure, working all things after the counsel of His own will (Phil. ii, 13; Eph. i, 11). Notice in the story of the talents the servants in the story of the talents the servants say "I have gained five talents more" or "I have gained two other talents," while in the story of the pounds they say "Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds," or "Lord, thy pound hath gained five pounds," recognizing that while we work it is really God who works, and yet He gives us the credit. It must be the vine bearing the fruit, else it counts for nothing (John xv. 5: It must be the vine bearing the fruit, else it counts for nothing (John xv, 5), whether the gain be five talents or two talents, ten pounds or five pounds, the words of approval are "Thou good servant" or "Thou good and faithful servant". Then notice in the recompense, authority over ten cities or five cities, ruler over many things, or, as we said at the beginning of the lesson, position in the kingdom according to work (Luke xiv, 14: Rev. xxii, 12: II John 8.

ziv. 14; Rev. zzii, 12; 11 John 8. In reference to taking from the unfaithful servant "that he hath," it is explained in Luke viii, 18, by the rords, "that which he seemeth bave," or as in the margin. "thinketh that he hath." He only seemed to be a servant, thought that he was one.

A few years ago a very pompous British general was making his an-nual inspection of a famous Irish regiment. Now, although he bore a great reputation as a martinet, he had seen no active service, and was one of those who judged a soldier's worth by his conduct sheet.

There was serving in the regiment one Patrick O'Doherty, who had been through three arduous campaigns, and who was the proud possessor of five war medals, including one for "distinguished conduct on the field." Unfortunately for Patrick, the piping times of peace had reigned for about six years, and owing to his weakness for strong drink he was constantly in trouble, and only that very morning trouble, and only that very mornin had been deprived of his last goo

Mighty Punch Bowl.
The biggest punch brew on record was made October 25, 1694, at the home of Rt. Hon. Edward Russell, commander-in-chief of his majesty's forces in the Mediterranean. A garden fountain, placed where four walks met, was used as a bowl, and in it the following ingredients were poured: Four hogsheads of brandy, 25,000 lemons, 20 gallons of lime juice, 1,300 hundredweight of white Lisbon sugar, five pounds of grated nutmegs, 300 toasted biscuits and one pipe of dry mountain Malaga. Here, fiideed, was a punch bowl worthy of the heroes of the seventeenth century. A boat was specially built so that a boy might row about in it and fill the cups of the assembled guests, who probably num-

At first the recognized formula was "Allons," a colloquialism which when properly accentrated is equivaent to "Hurry up, there." But it was found to be far from perfect, and so it was shortened into "Allo," a term which spread to Belgium and other European countries.—Paris Letter in the New York Sun.

Gilbert says there is an embarrassing likeness between the gander and the goose, and out of the breeding That's the greatest word in modern business—Service. With the manufac-turer it bears a lot of weight; with the jobber, too. But with the retail merchant—the man who deals directly with Mr. and Mrs. Consumer—Service is just as great a business asset as each individual merchant cares to make it. Eliminate the special service features and one grocery store will be about the same as the other, this meat market will be little different than the next one and your hardware store would be very similar to the rest of them, because practically the same kinds of goods are carried in nearly all stores that are in like classes of retailing.

But with service features added, every store assumes character, and the better the service, the more prosperous the proprietor is bound to be.

Mr. Consumer goes into the store that makes no special effort at rendering good service. The place is badly kept, and there is a tone about it that leaves the impression—"get what you want and then get out." He gets it, pays, gets his change from an old cash drawer below the counter, asks for delivery at a certain time—and of course the non-service proprietor falls to get the order delivered at that time. Well, there wasn't much about hat purchase that would make Mr. Consumer care to go to the same store again, even though the goods were entirely satisfactory and the prices

So the next time he goes to the store in the next block, whose pro-prietor has been advertising "service" so strongly. This place he finds well kept—cheerful—the clerks are pleas antly polite, are willing to show things antly polite, are willing to show things-without that "you'vegot-to-buy-it-now" attitude. A purchase is made, the sale is rung up on a handsome cash register that flashes "Thanks" on a little electric sign. With his change he receives the cash register receipt which makes a special offer if $10 worth of the receipted checks are re-turned.

Everything has been handled quick-ly and Mr. Consumer leaves in a happy mood that makes him want to come again. And the delivery is made on time. Everything just right about on time. Everything just right about that store. He'll go there again, and tell his friends, too.

In after years he found that whenever he had the slightest complaint to make—which was seldom—the service store would go out of its way to make things right. Careful handling of little troubles is a big factor in building a healthy business reputation.

In all lines of business, men are be ginning to realize that service should hold first place in their attention, be-cause good service will always bring its reward and there need be little fear on the question of profits.

Returns will always be in proportion to the expenditures made for service improvements and it is right that profits from a business should be used in improving, enlarging and making it more capable of rendering good service to the community.

Wherever you can, advertise your special features, then live up to them strictly, and you'll find it pays hand

The sure, quick and satisfac-tory way to inform the reading public about the special merits of any particular kind of mere is to tell about them in chandise is to tell about them in a clean-cut, straighforward manner in the advertising columns of good newspapers, information of this kind is news—valuable, interesting news to the reader. Frequently the most important news in the newspaper is that found in the advertisements.

The Critical Farmer The farmer has the reputation of being critical and frequently skeptical, but his business makes him so. He cannot take things for granted in crop matters, in soil questions or breeding propositions. He must know what he is doing and why. This is why he questions new and untried problems. He is not afraid to advance, but he insists on knowing why and where he is headed. This makes it a little more difficult, metimes, to get merchandise intro duced, or to get quick action on a cam paign.

However, most of the farmer's doubt disappears when he becomes acquainted and is satisfied everything is all ed and is satisfied everything is all right. How warmly he welcomes a stranger who is introduced or sent by an old friend!

This in itself is the best reason for advertising. It makes the farmer ac-quainted and dissipates his doubt and
