A Youthful Landlord.

Last week Master Derward T.
Stokes of Burlington, in company with his grandfather, Capt James
A. Turrentine, came to Graham on a purely business trip. His grandfather as mall plat of land and he brought the deed to have it put on record. First he went to the Clerk and had it probated, then he carried it to the Register of Deeds for regitration. Though only six years of age he transacted the business with rate intelligence. He is perhaps the youngest freeholder in the State and is a bright little fellow and is very proud of being a land owner. He goes to Sunday school, leads his class and manifests the same degree of intelligence in doing the state and the state and manifests the same degree of intelligence in doing the state and the state and manifests the same degree of intelligence in doing the state and the state and manifests the same degree of intelligence in doing the state and state the same degree of intelligence in doing the state and state the same degree of intelligence in doing the state and state the same degree of intelligence in doing the state and state and state the same degree of intelligence in doing the state and state the same degree of intelligence in doing the state and state the same degree of intelligence in doing the state and sta the same degree of intelligence in doing things there that he showed in getting his deed on record.

Something to Do.

There is a significance about a town business men's organization. town Dusiness to be used to be a superstant of the latent forces to put them into activity—that is the purpose for which the Graham Commercial Club was brought into existence last night. It has a fertile existence last night. It has a fertile fall right here in Graham for operations of the control of the place that her natural advantages and possibilities make rightfully thers.

A lot of people may want to know: "Why is a Commercial Club, anyway? Haven't we a city administration?" Yes, but that is more or less politics.

A Commercial Club represents, or should represent, unselfish, loval civic patriotism. And among the objects of the Commercial Club the mentioned: The establishment of a news bureaut to edvantise the town:
