The writer will not attempt to outline in advance what the Doctor will have to say upon the important subject to be discussed, but the liberty will be taken to say that the subject is a vast deal more important than the majority know. The teeth are the implements provided by nature to grind the grist that daily sustains the body. A monthful of them is provided both man and beast, which indicates that the grist should be well ground to start with. Manmade machinery must be kent clean.
