Millions in Tuberculosis Fight.

Journal of the American Medical Association. The National Association for the Prevention and Study of Tuberculosis reports that during 1915 more than $22,500,000 was spent in the tuberculosis campaign, an increase of $17,500,000 as compared with a decade ago.

The work of the association has increased from the care of tuberculosis patients, which was its sole function, until last year when more than $1,000,000 was spent in organization and education; more than another million in examining, giving advice to, and treating patients; more than $350,000 was spent in treating tuberculous children; while nearly $750,000 was spent in the care of the tuberculous insane and criminals.

The bulk of the amount spent in the anti-tuberculosis campaign was, of course, expended in sanitariums and hospitals, nearly 600 of which expended $19,250,000.

Resolved: That North Carolina Should Adopt a State-Wide Stock Law.

Chapel Hill News Letter. Affirmative Arguments. I. It is a just law, for it gives to one the full possession of his property and saves the expense of protecting cultivated fields. New settlers will not locate where this expense is necessary.

II. It is a necessary law, for the preservation of the timber industry. The open range hog eats the pine nuts and roots up the seedlings. In counties having a stock law the long leaf pine forests are being restored. In open range districts thousands of acres are burnt over every year, destroying standing trees, seedlings, and the vegetable matter in the soil.

III. It is better for the stock raisers, for it makes tick eradication possible; it makes feeding, butchering, and marketing more convenient and economical; it raises the value of stock, for stock in stock law counties is worth almost twice as much as stock in open range counties; it permits the raising of stock of high quality, for breeding can be controlled. The open range, on the other hand, permits the uncontrolled reproduction of scrub stock.

Negative Arguments. I. The State-wide stock law is unnecessary, for the Code of North Carolina provides that when any district or county desires it, an election shall be held, and if a majority of voters favor it, the stock law goes into effect.

II. The stock law will be a handicap on many men who do not own sufficient land for pasture, for, under open range conditions, they can turn their stock out during a great portion of the year, in eastern North Carolina, practically the whole year.

III. Though it may be granted that better stock is raised under stock law, yet it costs a great deal more than under open range conditions. Cattle and hogs raised under open range are almost clear profit, since they cost their owners very little in care and attention and feed.

Typhoid Vaccination. If there were any need of an additional proof of the value of anti-typhoid inoculation this would be well supplied from the latest reports from the British army in France and Belgium.

In the trench fighting of the present war it is a practical impossibility to carry out successfully the ordinary methods of sanitation. Yet since the beginning of the hostilities there have been but 1,365 cases of typhoid among the British forces. Nearly all of these were among persons who had failed to receive the inoculation. Among the few inoculated persons who developed the disease the death rate has been less than one-third of that among the uninoculated.

Take the Garden Cure. State Board of Health Bulletin. "Hoo-handle medicine" is about the best remedy that can be prescribed this time of the year for about three-fourths of all the common ailments. It will prove beneficial to chronic roughness and "spring fever," and no less effective for sluggish livers, poor appetites, after-effects of colds and grip and the general run-down condition in which winter usually leaves the body. It is said that in one's own back yard—garden—lies the solution of one's own peculiar problems. In other words, worry, in all its various forms, when taken to the garden vanishes in the open air and sunshine.

The "garden cure" is especially recommended for that mental and physical condition so characteristic of the spring that makes you feel that you are only half alive—that tired feeling that the patent medicine literature talks so knowingly about. And it's this same tired feeling which the patent medicine sellers have been so successful in appealing to that makes the spring time their golden harvest time. Tonics and teas that our grandmothers used to give for this condition had at least one virtue—they were harmless, but it is not so with their successors—the patent medicines. The majority of the cures that have replaced the herb brew and the root tea contain either alcohol or opiates, but probably their worst fault is that they raise false hopes, waste precious time and get hard earned money all under false claims. However, the day of the patent medicine faker is believed to be about over and disease and health are coming to be dealt with through honest, practical methods.

The "garden cure" has a number of features to recommend it, and its most valuable, perhaps, is exercise in the open air and the time spent in the sunshine. Then there's the "garden case" that is grown that is the best of spring tonics, especially when included in the daily bill of fare. Early spring greens and garden vegetables and less of meats and heavy foods will go a long way toward avoiding "spring fever" and that "let-down feeling."

You Know What You Are Taking. When you take Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic because the formula is plainly printed on every bottle showing that it is Iron and Quinine in a "tasteless" form. No cure, no pay—5c.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed a local remedy, but steadily failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Remedy, manufactured by Dr. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Catarrh Remedy that cures. It is taken internally in doses from 20 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for free booklet. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Taking Onion Flavor Out of Milk.

Farm Extension News. According to results obtained with feeding two different brands of stock foods to cows, it is not profitable to feed these with a view to controlling onion flavor in milk. Mr. W. H. Eaton found that though the flavor was materially weakened in both cases, still it was not eliminated enough to make the milk palatable. Both of the brands were guaranteed to eradicate the flavor.

Practically the only method yet found to eradicate this onion flavor is to take the cows from the pasture about four hours before milking. This would mean that when pastures are heavily infested with the wild onion, the cows should not be allowed to graze in the afternoon. Feeding with molasses or molasses feeds will reduce the flavor considerably. The method of putting a small piece of saltpetre beside a grain of corn in the bottom of the milk, as advocated by some dairymen, was found to be without merit; the flavor, in this case, being as strong as ever.

To eradicate the flavor from cream received at the Experiment Station Creamery at West Raleigh a blower will be operated while the cream is being pasturized, and the fresh air will practically eliminate the flavor.

NOTE.—After milking in the morning, the cow can be grazed where onions are and, if taken in by 11 o'clock, the milk at the evening milking will have little or no onion flavor. Likewise the cow can be grazed for 3 or 4 hours after the evening milking and the morning milk will have little or no onion flavor.—Edr. Gleaner.

Why Gasoline is High. In Farm and Fireside Dr. Walter F. Rittman, chemical engineer of the United States bureau of mines, guesses—and his guess is worth something—that gasoline will go right on advancing in price.

"In 1910 there were 350,000 automobiles in the country," he says. "Now there are 2,250,000. A million new ones are added annually," while about one-fourth that number are 'scrapped.' "There are 700,000 gasoline engines working on farms, and 6,000,000 other farms are wanting to buy engines.

"There are about 300,000 motor boats in the country," using gasoline. "The demand for gasoline is increasing by leaps and bounds. The supply of petroleum is decreasing.

"Before the war we were exporting about 100,000,000 gallons of gasoline annually. Now it is 300,000,000 to 400,000,000, or thirty to forty per cent. of the whole production."

PEACE IN EUROPE—WHEN? In It United States May Play Big Part. Baltimore Sun. Peace in Europe, is of course, much nearer than it was six months ago, but how much nearer, it is difficult for anyone on the outside to determine. But the persistent reports that have come recently from different quarters are signs not to be wholly disregarded, especially when they come from those who are in a position to know, but that they mean something seems certain. There can be little doubt that Germany would be glad to make peace on such more reasonable terms than she would have assented to a year ago; and there is probably as little doubt that Britain and France are inclined to a far less ruthless program than would have satisfied them twelve months since. But precisely how much any of the three is now ready to concede is a matter of speculation.

One doubt about the situation on the part of the allies is as to Russia's attitude. She might not be willing to accept terms that might be unobjectionable to France and Great Britain. She has expended an immense amount of money in this struggle, and she has not done it from altruistic motives. She will likely demand her reward and it may be dangerous to either grant it or refuse it.

There are clearly still many difficulties in the path of peace, but one thing is certain and stands out in all the uncertainty is that this country, if it remains uninvolved, will be called upon to play a most important part in the final settlement. All eyes naturally turn to the United States at every fresh revival of peace talk and we have every reason to believe that it is full that we have maintained a position which may enable us to render a great service to the world.

The best place to hide money is where they have vaults for safely protecting it. Every week we see newspaper accounts of people having been robbed. Sugar bowls, rag bags, under the carpet, behind pictures, and all of those other places where people conceal their money, are well known to burglars. Hide it in OUR BANK, then you know you can get it when you want it.
