CHAPTER VII.

That night Duane was not troubled by ghosts haunting his walking and sleeping hours. He awoke feeling himself to please, to anuse, to interbright and eager, and grateful to est, to fascinate her, and always with bright and eager, and grateful to Euchre for having put something worth while into his mind. During breakfast, however, he was unusually thoughtful, working over the idea of how much or how little he could confide in the outlaw. He was aware of Euchre's scrutiny.
"Wal," began the old man, at last,

"how'd you make out with Jennie? What 'd you an' she talk about?" "We had a little chat: You know you wanted me to cheer her up." Buchre sat with coffee-cup poised and narrow eyes studying Duane.

"Buck, I've seen some outlaws had been instructed by Euchre to whose word was good. Mine is. You listen, to understand that this was can trust me. I trusted you, takin' Duane's only chance to help keep her my tryin' to help thet poor kid."

Thus enjoined by Euchre, Duane began to tell the conversations with Jennie and Mrs. Bland word for word. Long before he had reached an end Euchre set down the coffee-cup and began to stare, and at the conclusion of the story his face lost some of its red color and beads of sweat stood out thickly on his brow.

"Wal, if thet doesn't floor me!" he ejaculated, blinking at Duane. "Young man, I figgered you was some swift, an' sure to make your mark on this river; but I reckon I missed your real caliber. Do you know what it 'll take to do all you promised Jen?" "I haven't any idea," replied Duane, gravely.

"You'll have to pull the wool over Kate Bland's eyes, an' even if she falls in love with you, which 's shore likely, thet won't be easy. An' she'd kill you in a minnit, Buck, if she ever got wise. You ain't mistaken her none, are you?" "Not me, Euchre. She's a woman. I'd fear her more than any man."

"Til have to. I wouldn't ask you to the majority of the outlaws."

"Wal, I'll take my chances," replied Euchre, gruffly. "I'm going to help Jennie, you can gamble your last peso

They talked and planned, though in truth it was Euchre who planned, Duane who listened and agreed. While Duane who instends and agreed. While awaiting the return of Bland and his lieutenants it would be well for Duane to grow friendly with the other outlaws to sit in a few games of monte, willingness to spend a little money. The two schemers were to

It never seemed to be gloved, never to be injured, never out of sight or in an awkward posi-tion. Grizzled outlaws in that group, some of whom had many notches on their gun-handles, accorded Duane silence that carried conviction of the egard in which he was held.

"Orful hot, ain't it?" remarked Bill Black, presently.

Bill could not keep quiet for long. He was a typical Texas desperado, had never been anything else. He was stoop-shouldered and bow-legged from much riding; a wiry little man, all muscle, with a square head, a hard face partly black from scrubby beard and red from sun, and a bright, roving, cruel eye. His shirt was open at the neck, showing a grizzled brenst. "Lazlest outfit I ever rustled with," went on Bill, discontentedly. "Nuthin' to do! Say, if anybody wants to swim maybe some of you'll gamble?" He produced a dirty pack of cards
