During the first months of the war the marriage tie was strengthened and tenderness and respect for woman was heightened with religious senti-ment. But the war lasted too long. Many people accustomed themselves to separation and adjusted themselves to the freedoms and privileges of single life.

Women performing the tasks and assuming the respo nsibilities men acquired a taste for masculine independence. Many lost interest for one reason or another in their homes.

Meantime their husbands acquired a new attitude toward life. Whe wounded they were attended by women of greater refinement than they had known before. They reached home full of illusions, which a few days dissipated, because these illusions had never been based on reality. So long as they were absent they felt the old tenderness; as soon as they returned they discovered their alienation. It followed that many families were united only when they were parted.

The husband having served through a frightful campaign, and en-dured untold hardships, relieved of all obligations to be patient and for-bearing, made excessive demands upon those with whom he lived. Wives no longer felt obligated to obedience nor even to returning to the domestic fireside. They did what they pleased and resented any attempt to check their will.

The result is that separations and divorces have multiplied.

BEADS PREFERRED TO BREAD | GOT REPORT THAT COUNTED

People of the Levant Set Great Stock on Colored Glass of Every Description.

Beads are more necessary than bread to the Levant. Men, women and children wear and carry beads to ward off ill luck. Even the horses and donkeys have strands of beads about their necks "to baffle the evil eye," and the long horns of the work oxen are decorated with blue-andwhite beads to keep them from falling prey to diseases. In Athens, Constantinople, Tiflis,

Smyrna and other cities of the Levant men of all classes carry short strands of fidget beads, which they play with while walking in the street, riding in street cars and trains just as nervous men in the West finger their watchchains. Bead shops abound everywhere in the larger cities and genera you know. stores and market stalls sell them in the smaller places. Peddlers hawk them in the streets everywhere. Light-colored amber beads of large size are the latest thing in beads for women. Meerschaum beads are also popular, and for the moment plain heads of all sorts have displaced ighly ornate carved beads of the type which Syrians produce in great quan-tities for exportation.—Washington

If you speak of the cruelties practiced by the Germans in their con-duct of the war, they answer by the assertion that they were less cruel than their enemies. If you instance the ruthlessness of the submarine warfare as the crowning instance of Prussian cruelty, they retort with apparent sincerity that it was justifiable retaliation for the more cruel blockade methods practiced by their enemies, which were condemning the women and children of Germany to death by starvation.
