

CONDENSED NEWS FROM THE OLD NORTH STATE

Winston-Salem.—Miss Madge Colli-son, aged 18, a manicurist working in a local barber shop, attempted suicide by taking two bichloride of mercury tablets.

Durham.—Prompt action toward the erection of a Masonic temple in Durham by the Durham and Eno lodges, in company with the Durham Shrine club, has been taken by the Durham Masons.

Wilmington.—Kid Hawkins, negro pugilist, will spend his next twelve months training on the county roads of New Hanover county for alleged remarks concerning the possibility of race riots, and carrying a gun, according to a verdict in the recorder's court.

Morganton.—Morganton's handsome new hotel is rapidly nearing completion. During the past week the directors have been receiving bids on the furnishings and the plan now is to have it ready to open on or about May 15. A five years' lease has been arranged with J. H. Gaston, an experienced hotel man of Johnson City, Tenn.

Hamlet.—Charles A. Sloane, editor of the Oteen Echo, of Oteen, spoke to the American Legion here. He outlined the things the legion stood for, spoke very touchingly of the ex-soldiers flat on their backs in the hospital, some of whom, he said, were still very cheerful and spent their days writing jokes about the soldiers' bonus.

Winston-Salem.—Entering a plea of Nolo contendere to a charge of second degree burglary in the superior court at Mocksville, I. R. Elam, for years a tobacco buyer of Winston-Salem, and Lester Cornatzer, of Davie county, who has been connected with various vaudeville enterprises, were sentenced by the court to serve a term of not less than 15 years nor more than 25 years.

Kinston.—A huckleberry farm, with regularly cultivated bushes, will be started in the southwest section, near this city, by Will D. Hood, of Kinston, and Ben. Barnes of Maxton, it was announced by the former.

Wilmington.—The Dispatch, local afternoon newspaper, has been placed in the hands of receivers by Judge Frank Daniels, of superior court, acting on the complaint of James Cruikshank, vice president and general manager.

New Bern.—George H. Roberts, prominent local banker and churchman, died at his home here after an illness of two weeks, following several years of failing health. The deceased was in his 85th year.

Asheville.—Alice Baldwin, 50, who several weeks ago shot her husband, Preston Baldwin, four times, after a dispute which occurred in Chunn's Cove, was found guilty by a jury in superior court.

Greensboro.—Following information relative to the escape of 20 prisoners from the Guilford county convict camp within the past month, Judge B. F. Long in superior court here ordered an investigation of the camp.

Chapel Hill.—Victor V. Young, of the junior class, was almost unanimously elected editor-in-chief of the 1923 Yackety Yack at the regular business meeting of the Philanthropic assembly, that being the regular time for the assembly's election of its officers to the Carolina Magazine board and Yackety Yack board of next year.

Salisbury.—Robert C. Clement, 45, of Rogersville, Tenn., wealthy dealer in poultry and produce, fell from a train of twelve cars of live poultry which he was accompanying to New York ten miles west of Salisbury on the Asheville division of the Southern railway, and was instantly killed.

New Bern.—The remains of Leany Ham, 17-year-old negro, who disappeared from his home near Clarke, five weeks ago, were found, along with the boy's gun in a clump of bushes "back of the 'pecan farm,' three miles from New Bern.

Winston-Salem.—Yeggmen broke in to the postoffice at Kernersville and by the use of nitro-glycerine, blew open the two doors to the safe, from which they secured eight or nine thousand dollars in money, stamps, Liberty Bonds and other valuable papers.

Marion.—The town of Marion sold $65,000 worth of school bonds at a premium of $750. Sidney Spitzer & Co., of Toledo, Ohio, were the successful bidders. This means that Marion is to have a new high school building in the near future.

Greenville.—A social welfare survey is to be made in Pitt county some time in April. F. F. Carter, executive officer of the state child welfare commission, and his assistant D. R. Markham are here conferring with County Welfare Superintendent K. T. Trefler.

What Are Symbrels? The novel of the future, according to Shaw Desmond, will be like his novels, not a novel at all but a symbol. Mr. Desmond goes on in highly technical and polysyllabic terms to define what a symbrel is, comparing it to a kaleidoscope, and to a many-faceted diamond, but disregarding the spelling, one is very likely to think the name originated with the tinkling symbol and that the great difference lies in the introduction of one syllable for euphony's sake.

Ramsey Milholland

by Booth Tarkington Illustrations by Irwin Myers

"PEACH OF A PUNCH."

Synopsis.—With his grandfather, small Ramsey Milholland is wading in the "Decoration Day Parade" in the home town. The old gentleman, a veteran of the Civil war, endeavors to impress the younger with the significance of the great conflict, and many years afterward the boy was to remember his words with startling vividness. In the schoolroom, a few years afterward, Ramsey is not quite gushed for remarkable ability, though his pronounced dulness is arithmetic. "Recitations" and German. In sharp contrast to Ramsey's backwardness in the proficiency of Dora Youum, a young lady whom in his bitterness he denigrates "Teacher's Pet." In high school, where he and Dora are classmates, Ramsey continues to feel that the girl delights to manifest her superiority, and the vindictiveness he generates becomes alarming, culminating in the resolution that some day he will "show" her. At a class picnic Ramsey is captured and bargeage by Milla Rust, the class beauty, and endures the agonies of his first love. Ramsey's recent object to Milla and wish he'd taken up with Dora Youum. Ramsey kisses Milla. Then Milla suddenly leaves town, she marries the son of the state university and there is Dora Youum again. Ramsey meets Dora in a World War debate and is ingloriously vanquished.

He was so right, in regard to his own performance, at least, that, thereupon drying up utterly, he proceeded to stand, a speechless figure in the midst of a multitudinous silence, for an eternity lasting forty-five seconds. He made a racking effort, and at the end of this epoch found words again. "In making my argument in this debate, I would state that—"

"Two minutes," said the chairman. "Refutation by the negative. Miss D. Youum. Two minutes." "I waive them," said Dora, primly. "I submit that the affirmative has not refuted the argument of the negative." "Very well." With his gavel the chairman sharply tapped the desk before him. "The question is now before the house. Resolved, that Germany is both morally and legally justified in her invasion of Belgium. All those in favor of the—"

But here there was an interruption of a kind never before witnessed during any proceedings of the Lumen society. It came from neither of the debaters, who still remained standing at their desks until the vote settling their comparative merits in argument should be taken. The interruption was from the rear row of seats along the wall, where sat new members of the society, freshmen not upon the program of the evening. A loud nasal voice was heard from this quarter, a loud but nasal voice, shrill as well as nasal, and full of a strange hot passion. "Mr. Chairman!" it cried. "Look-a-here, Mr. Chairman! Mr. Chairman, I demand to be heard! You gotta gimme my say, Mr. Chairman! I'm a-gonna have my say! You look-a-here, Mr. Chairman!"

Shocked by such a breach of order, and by the unseemly violence of the speaker, not only the chairman but everyone else looked there. A short, strong figure was on its feet, gesticulating fiercely; and the head belonging to it was a large one with too much curly black hair, a flat swarthy face, shiny and not immaculately shaven; there was an impression of ill-chosen clothes, too much fat red lip, too much tooth, too much eyeball. Fred Mitchell recognized this violent interrupter as one Linski, a fellow freshman who sat next him in one of his classes. "What's that cuss up to?" Fred wondered, and so did others. Linski showed them.

He pressed forward, showing himself through the two rows in front of him till he emerged upon the green carpet of the open space, and as he came, he was cyclonic with words. "You don't put no such stuff as this over, I tell you!" he shouted in his hot, nasal voice. "This here's a free country, and you call yourself a debating society, do you? Lemme tell you I belong to a debating society in Chicago, where I come from, and them fellas up there, they'd think they'd oughta be shot for a fake like what you people are tryin' to put over, here, tonight. I come down here to git some more education, and pay fer it, too, in good hard money I've made sweatin' in a machine shop up there in Chicago; but if this is the kind of education I'm a-gonna git, I better go on back there. You call this a square debate, do you?"

He advanced toward the chairman's platform, shaking a frantic fist. "Well, if you do, you got another think comin', my capitalls' friend! You went and give out the question whether it's right for Choloimny to go through Belgium; and what do you do fer the Choloimny side? You pick out this here big stiff!" "aved his passionate hand at the paralyzed Ramsey—"you pick out a boob like that fer the Choloimny side, a poor fish that gits stage-fright so bad he don't know whether he's talkin' or dead; or else he fakes it; because he's a speaker so hum it looks more to me like he was faking. You git this big stiff to fake the Choloimny side, and then you go and stick up a goll aginns' him that's got brains and makes a pacifis' argument that wins the case aginns' the Choloimms like cuttin' through hog land! But you ain't a-gonna git away with it, mister. Lemme tell you right here and now, I may be a talk blood, but I got some Choloimny in me with the rest what I got, and before you vote on this here question you gotta hear a few words from somebody that can talk! This whole war is a capitalls' war, Belgium as much as Choloimny, and the United States is sellin' its soul to the capitalls' right now, I tell you, talkin' sides aginns' Choloimny. Orders fer explosives and ammunition and guns and Red Cross supplies is comin' into this country by the millions, and the capitalls' United States is fat already on the blood of the workers of Europe! Yes, it is, and I'll have my say, you boob-jaw faker, and you can hammer your ole gavel to pieces at me!"

He had begun to shriek; moisture fell from his brow and his mouth; the scandalized society was on its feet, moving nervously into groups. Evidently the meeting was about to disintegrate. "I'll have my say!" the frenzied Linski screamed. "You try to put up this capitalls' trick and work a fake to carry over this debate aginns' Choloimny, but you can't work it on me, lemme tell you! I'll have my say!"

The outraged chairman was wholly at a loss how to deal with the "unprecedented situation"—so he defined it, quite truthfully; and he continued to pound upon the desk, while other clamors began to rival Linski's; shouts of "Put him out!" "Order!" "Shut up, Freshman!" "Turn him over to the sophomores!"

"This meeting is adjourned!" belloyed the chairman, and there was a thronging toward the doors, while the frothing Linski asseverated: "I'm a-gonna git my say, I tell you! I'll have my say! I'll have my say!"

He had more than that, before the hour was over. A moment after he emerged from the building and came out, still hot, upon the cool, dark campus, he found himself the center of a group of his own classmates whom he at first mistook for sophomores, such was their manner. As this group broke up a few minutes later, a youth running to join it, scenting somewhat of interest, detained one of those who were departing.

"What's up? What was that squealing?" "Oh, nothing. We just talked to that Linski. Nobody else touched him, but Ramsey Milholland gave him a peach of a punch on the snoot." "Whoopee!"

Ramsey was laconic in response to inquiries upon this subject. When some one remarked: "You served him right for calling you a boob and a poor fish and so on before all the society, girls and all," Ramsey only said: "That wasn't what I hit him for." He declined to explain further.
