The Best Varietles of Soybeans.

Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 13.—The nost important points to consider in selecting a variety of soybeans are the purpose for which the crop s grown and the locality in which it is to be grown, states P. H. Kime, assistant agronomist in crop improvement for the North Carolina Experiment Station. One variety might be best for grain another variety would be better for hay or soil improvement, he says. The late beans do well in Eastern North Carolina but will not mature in the mountain section; therefore it is necessary here

For pasturage he reports that the best varieties are Ito-San or mail order houses. Black Eyebrow for very early and Mammoth for late pasture.

If soybeans are planted for soil mprovement, Mr. Kime states that the one which will produce the most organic matter for turning under is the best. For this section of the country he recom-mends the Mammoth Yellow.

Mr. Kime believes that no other investment which soybeans will pay better returns than the buying of good seed, even if double the price of ordinary seed is paid for them. However, he advises farmers to get their seed from reliable dealers or farmers and not pay enormous prices for some new variety of which they know nothing. It is better to get good seed of some variety already grown in a locality.

C. and manufacturing center in Pitt County, tops the Honor Roll record with 100 per cent in the "No Fire" class of 1922. And Wake Forest and Laurinburg, with 11 out of the twelve months, without a single fire casualty are worthy of emulation.

Considering the size of the cities, Guilford County may well be proud of High Point and Greensboro; they figure so prominently in the Honor Roll roster for 1922, and of the fact that Greensboro had not a single fire during the year where the loss amounted to $5,000.

During the year 1922 through direct investigating made by Comofficials, there were 25 convictions for arson, with corresponding sentences to prison.
