CASTING AND BROADCASTING.

"Constructive economy" has won another victory of the Pyrrhic variety, this time at Paul Smith's, whence it is broadcast that President Coolidge ruthlessly blue-penciled $100,000,000 of estimates for the next session of the Congress submitted to him by General Herbert M. Lord, director of the budget.

The General made a special hot-weather march from Washington to the President's summer camp to participate in the parade that attended the victory. So one reads in the big headlines "Coolidge Slashes $100,000,000."

But lower down is one of those tell-tale truths that have a way of slipping in, to-wit: Notwithstanding the cut, the 1928 budget is $55,000,000 greater than the last one.

That "constructive economy" fish gets bigger and bigger all the time.

"He feels," reads one of the accounts of the President's terrific battle to land economy at Paul Smith's, "that if the Federal government follows constructive economy policies it will furnish an example to the cities and states and that they will reduce their present heavy taxes."

For example, as set in the District of Columbia, governed by appointees of the President: Appropriations for the District were $33,918,571 by the recent session, an increase of more than $2,000,000 over the last preceding and now the budget estimates would push the amount up to about $39,000,000, and the tax rate would go up, too.

Appropriations by the last session of the Congress were $470,886,681 greater than by the session just preceding, the increase alone being greater than the total cost of the Federal government thirty years ago. The total was $4,409,377,454, as shown by tables inserted in the Congressional Record by Republican leaders, in the last session, and it would have been still greater had the President's recommendations been carried out by the Congress.

The enormous appropriations of the last session are now to be overtopped by $55,000,000.

First the bait was "administrative economy." Appropriations kept on growing. The bait then changed to "constructive economy." "Constructive" is a very wiggly worm that takes many shapes and colors.

If casting at Paul Smith's promises to continue good, General Lord, director of the budget, may well march again up the Adirondacks with new and enlarged estimates, get a Presidential "constructive" slash of $200,000,000 for the headlines and an actual net increase of $110,000,000 in the popular burden over the last budget.

What price, "constructive economy?"

Using magnesium limestone and a winter cover crop in the peach orchard should help prevent winter-killing this season and make the trees more healthy and vigorous next spring.

Abruzzi rye is superior of Rosen or common rye for North Carolina. The Abruzzi variety matures earlier, provides better grazing and makes more growth than any other varieties.

Demonstrations in Richmond County with wilt resistant cottons and cowpeas prove it to be possible to grow these crops on land which formerly would not produce a crop.

Some of the best poultry farmers in North Carolina will cull their flocks in early September and sell the non-layers at the poultry car.

Three cars of lime have been ordered cooperatively by farmers of Henderson county.

Prepares For Dairying Before Buying Cows

Noland Wells of Murphy in Cherokee county has prepared for dairying before buying his cows. He has constructed his cage before catching his bird because he believes that preparedness is a good policy for going into special lines of farming.

"Mr. Wells recently came into possession of an abandoned farm on which the soil was very poor," says S. J. Kirby, extension pasture specialist at State College. "Following the advice of his county agent, R. W. Gray, Mr. Wells set about to reclaim the farm, to increase the fertility of the soil and to get ready for the dairy business. He cut the user-by trees, the shrubs and briars. He filled up the gullies and planted part of the land to soil improving crops. Soybeans and cowpeas were used as an important part of this program."

Mr. Kirby states that there are now ten acres on the farm in meadow grasses and clovers, 15 acres are in permanent pastures, one-half acre in stock beets and the remainder of the 75 acres of cleared land is planted to corn and soybeans, oats, rye and wheat followed by soybeans for hay. The pasture is reported to be one of the best in the section. It has a good variety of grasses and clovers growing on land treated with ground limestone and acid phosphate before the crops were planted. All the poorer spots were covered with barnyard manure and the pasture is now grazed by a family cow with the weeds mowed periodically to keep it in condition.

Tons of hay have been harvested from the meadow land and the barn is full to overflowing with several stacks nearby. The beets are ready for the winter and prospects are good for a heavy corn crop.

The next step planned by Mr. Wells and county Agent Gray is to buy 10 or 12 high producing cows to consume the hay and grain and to graze the pasture. Mr. Gray states that most farmers go into the dairy business unprepared and therefore lose money but here is one man who is ready to produce butterfat at a profit.

To save life and limb

Grade crossing accidents can be prevented if you will approach the zone of danger determined to exercise caution for Your Own Protection.

THE peril of the road crossing has become a national problem with the multiplication of automobiles.

The Southern Railway System has eliminated 800 grade crossings, and is eliminating more every year, but over 6,000 remain to be separated on this system alone. The total cost to complete the work is a stupendous sum—probably half as much as the cost to build the railroads.

Even if the money were available, and the public willing to pay the increased freight and passenger rates necessary to provide a fair return on it, many years would be required to do the work.

Protection from the peril for the present generation at least must be found in some other way. Trains cannot stop at every crossing if they are to be run at the sustained speed expected by the public and required to carry the commerce of the country. The train crosses a highway about every mile. The motorist encounters a railroad only occasionally.

It is necessary, therefore, for the automobile driver to stop in order to avoid risk. No one who did this was ever killed.

It is better to save a life than to save a minute.

Thought in Insects

Among the higher invertebrates—the ants, bees, wasps and other social insects—there is a complex behavior which has been interpreted by some to imply a consciousness comparable with that of man. Others have emphasized the instinctive character of the activities of these animals and have been content to consider the higher insects as mere automata. The insects represent a line of evolution that has culminated in man, and it is difficult to compare the insect mind with human consciousness. Either the performances of bees and ants are largely reflex or must be attributed to a very complex affective consciousness.

Odd Slavery Conditions

There is much corroborative testimony and numerous references to the facts that there were at the outbreak of the Civil war a very large number of free negroes and that these negroes in many cases owned property and slaves. These latter, however, were usually members of their families whom they had redeemed and whom they held as slaves technically on account of the laws of many states which prohibited the manumitted slaves from remaining in the state or territory. In many cases the slaveholder, while himself originally a slave, had received his freedom before certain laws went into effect which were not retroactive.

HOME, DAD AND THE BOY

By FRANK H. CHELEY

The Alibi Dad HIS stock excuse is "too busy." He is a good friendly fellow, but he never delivers. His intentions are good, but his self-starter is out of fit. He fully intends to pal with his boy, but his middle name is "As-soon-as-I-can-get-to-it." He always finds himself engulfed in an emergency and so gets off with the kid until a later time. He belongs to forty-nine committees for the deaf, dumb and blind; serves on the Board of Directors of the Orphan's Home; but his own boy gets his inspiration and man-contacts with a "total stranger." There is one committee he falls on utterly—the committee of one to give his own boy a square deal. He is the Dad who "Could tear down the world And build it up new If he did half the things He intended to do." He is High Past Master at the Good Intentions Association. "Mother, tell me a funny story, please." "Wait, son, your father will be home by and by and he will tell us both one." Father was the Chief Alibi!
