Popular Police Officer Recovers From Long Illness

Suffering From Sluggish Liver, Stomach Trouble and Nervousness Caused by Breakdown, Washington Policeman Recovers Health, Strength Restored. Praises Tanlac

If you never feel well and just drag through the days, tired and fagged out; if your stomach rebels at taking food and you spend miserable hours doubled up with indigestion and if you do not sleep soundly and dizziness attacks you; if you are losing energy and weight, watch out! Get relief before it is too late! C. C. Grimley, 1402 Potomac Avenue, a well-known Washington, D. C., Police Officer suffered from a general breakdown and had to go to the hospital for 3 months. "When I left the hospital," says Officer Grimley, "I was in fairly good health. Then reaction set in. And my stomach began bothering me. My liver was sluggish and I couldn't eat a single thing without it disagreeing with me and causing intense pain. Constipation brought on headaches and my nerves went to pieces. At the end of a couple of hours I would feel as tired as I used to at the end of the day. "A friend suggested that I try Tanlac. This wonderful tonic has helped me greatly. It toned up my liver and banished constipation. I now eat hearty meals three times a day without a sign of stomach trouble. Tanlac has returned to me my old-time energy. It has done a world of good." Officer Grimley is only one of thousands of men and women who have been released from pain and suffering, who have been restored to good health and strength by Tanlac. This marvelous tonic, made from roots, barks and herbs according to the famous Tanlac formula may be what you need. The first bottle shows amazing results. Get Tanlac from your druggist. HOW THE PILGRIM MOTHER

Kept Her Family in Good Health

A statue to the Pilgrim Mother was recently unveiled at Plymouth Rock, Mass. Through her we honor every pioneer woman who endured privation and hardships that a nation might live. Shoulder to shoulder with her husband she built a home in the wilderness and reared her sturdy sons and daughters. She cooked and sewed. She spun and wove for her growing family and when they were ill, she brewed potent remedies from roots and herbs—such roots and herbs as are now used in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A Massachusetts woman writes: "I was all run-down, with no ambition. I was tired all the time. Sometimes I would be in bed two or three days at a time, and the doctor would have to give me something to quiet me. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have had wonderful results from it. I felt better after taking the second bottle, and I am never without it in the house now. I have told lots of people about it, and they say it helps them, too. I am willing to answer letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. J. W. CROSBY, 2 Hammond Street, Cambridge, Mass.

Salts Fine for Aching Kidneys

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders. You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders. Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Love Called Him to Flora

By R. J. OLIVER

(Copyright.)

MRS. MALVINA SHARPLES was having a heart-to-heart talk with her daughter Antoinette—otherwise Nettle. "Now you do as I say, and bring that young man to the scratch before he leaves this house tonight. You have had enough beaux, goodness knows! It's time you got a husband. What's going to become of us?"

"Oh do stop, mother," cried Nettle. "I'll get a husband when I get ready—and I guess I'm about ready now. I like Peter Barrows. It is too bad he hasn't more money—and a little more brains. But I have made up my mind to marry him. So don't nag. Has Mr. Bennet been around about the mortgage? The last time he called and you were out he stayed half an hour, talking, and didn't mention money. He said I had beautiful hair," added Nettle with a sigh.

"You don't suppose—" cried Malvina eagerly. "Of course not," snapped Nettle. "He is old enough to be my father—and away out of my reach anyway. Don't dream dreams, mother. Jim Bennet would not marry the queen of Sheba." It will be gathered that Nettle and her mother were not exactly sentimentalists. The hard struggle they had had since the death of the husband and father had made these two naturally matter-of-fact women more matter-of-fact still. Nettle was handsome, intelligent, Junoesque. Given a larger field and greater opportunities she might have gone far. As it was she had—after high school—become librarian of the public library in the little town. Efficiency was her middle name.

Peter Barrows had long been one of her admirers. He admired her intellect, her looks, her pose. He had got into the habit of calling upon her at frequent intervals. Still he had never seriously contemplated asking her to be his wife. She was good to look at and a pleasant and intelligent companion—that was all. He was employed by a large firm in the city fifteen miles away. Went in and out every day and lived alone with one old servant in the ancestral mansion he had inherited—about all he had inherited except a good name. He was a good-looking, clean-living young man with a sufficient salary. There was nothing brilliant about him, but he seemed to Malvina Sharples the most available young man for her purposes and she issued orders accordingly.

Peter went away from the Sharples' house that night an engaged man. When he entered that respectable homestead, nothing could have been farther from his thoughts than that he would leave it in this condition. He was bewildered, frightened when he got home and thought it over. Well, Peter is not the first young man who has unexpectedly found himself in like case. He knew he ought not to feel as he did and resolved to feel as he ought to feel. Yet it was a decided relief to him when, the next week, his firm sent him away on a business trip.

Something happened. Peter fell in love. She was the daughter of the man he had been sent out to do business with—a pretty little thing with hair verging on red; not highly intellectual; of the clinging sort—a clinging peach. Her name was Flora Irvin. When Peter diagnosed his case and found out what was the matter with him he was as dazed as he had been when he found himself engaged to Nettle—and a great deal more distressed. Honor bound him to Nettle—love called him to Flora.

By Nettle's request the engagement between her and Peter had been kept secret. But that made no difference, Peter was as fast bound in honor as if their engagement had been announced. Peter and Nettle had promised, when Peter went away, to write to each other every day. But somehow the correspondence had languished. A month went by and Peter's mission was ended. He prepared to turn his face eastward toward Nettle, home and duty. The very morning he was to start he received a letter from Nettle. She wrote that she felt that their engagement had been a mistake; they were not suited for each other. She gave him back his troth. She herself had resolved never to marry but to devote her life to library work. She felt herself better fitted for that than for matrimony.

Peter asked his firm by telegraph for a vacation and got it. He spent it in the Mid-West. When he finally started East he was again an engaged man. This time it was Flora. Arriving at his home town the first man he met as he stepped off the train was Jabes Calender, the town's news broker. "Well, Jabes, what's the news?" asked Peter.

"Oh, not much," replied Jabes, "ceptin' that Nettle Sharples was married yesterday to old Jim Bennet." Yes, Nettle had married Jim Bennet—and a mighty good wife she made him. Never was a more devoted couple. Malvina was supported in comfort in a separate establishment, complaining bitterly of her daughter's ingratitude.

When Bennet died Nettle grieved deeply, devoted her life to works of charity, and never married again. People said that it must have been a love match after all. Who knows? Peter and Flora live in the old Barrows' mansion in easy circumstances—Peter is a member of his firm now—and are on excellent terms with the widow Bennet.

Overdoing?

Hurry, Worry and Overwork Bring Heavy Strain.

MODERN life throws a heavy burden on our bodily machinery. The eliminative organs, especially the kidneys, are apt to become sluggish. Retention of excess uric acid and other poisonous waste often gives rise to a dull, languid feeling and, sometimes, toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning perfectly is often shown by burning or scanty passage of secretions. More and more people are learning to assist their kidneys by the occasional use of Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic. Ask your neighbor!

Watt's Figure Too Low!

James Watt, "discoverer" of steam, said that six pounds per square inch was the maximum safe pressure for boilers. That was before he died in 1819. Today 350 pounds pressure is the average in the great steam boilers that run most electric generating stations where a kilowatt-hour of current is produced for each 1½ pounds of coal, but engineers are experimenting with steam running up to 3,200 pounds—more than 500 times the pressure limit set by Watt.
