ISSUED EVERY THURSDAY.

$1.00 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

Entered at the Postoffice at Graham, N. C., as second-class matter.

GRAHAM, N. C., APRIL 18, 1929.

When Congress convened Monday, President Hoover had his message on Farm Relief ready. A business program was outlined. He gave the country to understand that legislation was no panacea for all the troubles that beset the tiller of the soil; nor that relief would be instantaneous, but that it would take time to bring about the desired relief. After all, as the President said, it is an experiment that the country can afford to make for its basic industry.

The party leaders had prepared and have introduced a bill along the lines suggested in Mr. Hoover's message, but there is no probability of it being rushed through. Proposed farm relief is no new idea. Congress and the people have discussed it and heard it discussed from about every conceivable angle.

A bill, may be not greatly differing from that now pending, was passed during Mr. Coolidge's administration. It was vetoed and Mr. Hoover was accorded a good deal of credit for the preparation of the veto message.

In the matter of Alamance county's road program, reported to have been the creature of Highway Commissioner J. Ellwood Cox, it appears some feeling has been generated. The matter came under discussion by newspaper correspondents, to which exception was or seems to have been taken by some of the County Commissioners. It was also reported that the Commissioners were not in accord with the purported program of the Highway Commissioner; however that may be, the County Chairman and Attorney called on the Highway Commissioner in Raleigh. The last move was a meeting of the County Commissioners last Monday. A number of interested citizens were present and spoke. No action was taken other than passing a resolution disclaiming any responsibility for what had appeared in the papers.

Governor's Farm Program For Annual Convention. Developing the farm program advocated by Governor O. Max Gardner and his advisory agricultural board will be the central theme of the annual State Farmer's Convention to be held at State College for the week of July 22 to 26 according to plans made for the convention at a meeting held in Raleigh last week.

Governor's Farm Program For Annual Convention.

That the program may receive full attention, the first two days will be consumed in general matters and feature addresses during which time the convention will hear Governor Gardner as principal speaker of the week. The last two days, and all of the sectional meetings for men, will be concerned entirely with ways and means of putting the program into actual operation. The college plans to invite the chairman of the county boards of agriculture and the county councils of farm women to attend the convention, bringing with them suggestions for their home counties and carrying back the ideas developed at the convention.

It was decided also to invite the Honorable Arthur M. Hyde, Secretary of Agriculture, to address the convention. Other noted speakers will be Dr. E. C. Brooks, President of State College, and W. A. Graham, Commissioner of Agriculture. Both of these are members of Governor Gardner's advisory board and will likely speak along the lines

A feature of the convention for the women attending will be the annual short course at which over 600 farm women were present last year. Awards will be made to three

Book Club Sponsors Courses in Cooking, Planning and Serving Meals, and Child Psychology.

The Mentor Book Club, sponsors three short courses in home-making, taught by Miss Sue Ramsey Johnston of the state department of education, Episcopal parish house, Burlington, April 29th to May 3rd, and the following is a short description of the courses offered:

1.—Party Cookery The aim of this course to take up more elaborate foods which are appropriate for luncheons, the bridge party and formal dinners. More effort is spent in making foods tasty and beautiful than in making them easy to digest and economical. Unusual foods are used to aid in interpreting the hotel menu, as truffles, angelica, French caviar, etc. The use of the pastry tube is demonstrated often. 2.—Planning and Serving Meals The fundamental aim of this course is to have healthy men, women and children. Each lesson will take up principles of nutrition based on scientific facts, but presented in a practical way, that are essential in feeding a family properly. It is desired to give the housewife a basis for planning well balanced meals that she may not give the body more of one food principle than it can use and omit other necessary ones that might easily have been had if she had but known what elements the body needs and what foods furnish these specific substances. Men who wish to know how to choose foods for health are admitted to this course.

3.—Child Psychology A course for fathers and mothers in the proper development of the child mentally, physically, socially and emotionally according to the results of scientific studies. Every day behavior of the child as well as special problems are discussed, such as: "Hereditry and Environment," How a Child Learns, Punishments and Rewards, Habit Formation, Foods for Children, Toys, Books and Literature for Children and Parents, sex education and sex information.

New Wheat Disease Discovered In State.

A disease of wheat, new to North Carolina, and causing a reduction of 20 percent in the yield of grain in affected fields has been discovered by Dr. S. G. Lehman, plant pathologist, at State College.

This disease is sometimes called mosaic but in its reverse aspect is known as "rosette." The disease has been known for some years in Indiana and Illinois and has probably been in this State for four or five years without its presence being known. How it came here, Dr. Lehman does not know.

He says, however, that growers may locate it in their fields by the patches of badly dwarfed plants found scattered about after growth of healthy plants has started in the spring. On examining these patches, the grower will find an abnormal blue-green color of the fall leaves. This will be followed by a mosaic mottling of the new spring leaves, the dying of outer leaves and fall tillers, a browning at the base of affected plants and excessive development of spring tillers. This will give the diseased plants a bunched appearance. Some of the plants may be killed entirely while in the dwarfed stage.

Later when healthy plants are heading, the diseased plants may send up short, weak stems which bear poorly filled heads. The diseased plants also remain green while the normal plants are ripening. The loss in affected spots amounts to about 100 percent and the small amount of grain sometimes produced is shriveled and worthless.

Dr. Lehman advocates resistant varieties as one control method. He also suggests that the diseased plants be destroyed when centers of infestation are found. The trouble is caused by a virus in the soil and is not transferred by seed. It is spread by a transfer of infected soil and diseased straw. of the State program.

or more outstanding farm women. These are being selected by the home demonstration workers at this time. Secretary James M. Gray is now at work building the program for the annual convention. With definite plans ahead, the meeting this summer should be a turning point in the agricultural development of North Carolina, says the secretary.

Select Club Members For National Camp.

Kathleen Mock of Davidson County, Mae Swan of Cumberland, Frank Raymond of Hertford and Edmund Aycock of Wayne will represent the 4-H club boys and girls of North Carolina at the annual National Club Camp at Washington, D. C. during the week of June 19 to 25.

These four young people were selected by the agricultural extension workers of State College because of their outstanding work last year and since they have been members of organized clubs. Each State is permitted to send two boys and two girls to the National Club Camp each year. Those sent must have completed three or more years of club projects and must be actively engaged in club work at the time selected.

Each of the four to represent North Carolina this summer have good records. They have each served as officers of their local and county clubs, have done excellent project work and have been valuable aids to their farm and home agents in promoting the principles of 4-H club work in their home counties.

Kathleen Mock is secretary of the State 4-H club organization and has been of great help to her home agent, Miss Elizabeth Cornelius. Mae Swan has conducted meetings and demonstrations for her home agent, Miss Elizabeth Gainey, during her absence from the county. Both girls have been club members about five years and have had no-
