The Senate is against the President on the debenture proposition. It appears that the Senate's idea of helping the farmer is to give him something to show for it, something that he can use and convert to his aid and comfort.

Now Congress has hopped on the tariff. Not to hold it down, but to give it a boost. The reports say the highest tariff ever is the purpose of the revision. Just how a higher duty will help the mass of the people is a myth.

The Democracy of Burlington woke up Tuesday and returned Mayor Horner to office for the sixth term. His vote was three to one for his Republican opponent. The result, if the Democrats of that city stay in the same humor as on Tuesday, will turn the trick in the next county election.

A Congressman has proposed an investigation of the strike at Gastonia by the Government. That would be a long draw-out affair. Government investigations move slowly; and what is to become of the strikers in the meanwhile? The strike is a local affair that properly comes up for settlement in a local way, unless its proportions should become so great that it would become a menace to the general government.

Odd Divorce Customs

Found Among Malays

There is a peculiar Malay tribe in Sumatra, numbering only a few hundred persons, who spend their entire lives on the water, a small boat being their lifelong home. The stern of the craft has the rudest kind of a shelter, while amidships there is an arrangement of stone on which a fire is built. Forward there are baskets and other means of carrying fish and other commodities which these persons gather and trade. They have no laws or organization, but they have rather definite ideas of marriage and divorce. The lovers man, meeting the girl of his choice, asks her parents. If found to be agreeable the youth has to pay down 12 Dutch dollars (equal to 30 guilders); that is, if he is able to. But he also may purchase on the installment plan and make time payments. But in this case he cannot get a divorce unless the full amount is paid to the wife. The pair then go through a ceremony. If the husband wants a divorce, then he loses the 30 guilders paid, but if the wife wants to get divorced, then she must pay 120 guilders to the husband, which she will be able to do only in the rarest cases. If the man gets his divorce, then he may decide whether the children must go with him or whether they may remain with the mother; if the wife obtains a divorce and has paid the 120 guilders, then the children may choose for themselves.

Simple Way to Handle

Child's Fear of Dark

If your child develops a fear of the dark, do you know how to handle it? It is possible to cure him in a very simple way. When you put him to bed tonight, leave the door partly open and a dim light burning in the hall. The child will go to sleep. Then, gradually, close the door a little and dim the light a little every night. If you work patiently, four or five nights will enable you to recondition the child so that the door can be closed and the light turned out. If you do not control the child in this patient way, you may, by shouting at him or spanking him, keep him from whimpering out loud when you put him to bed in the dark, but he will lie in bed trembling with fear. This is not your aim. Your real purpose should be to remove the fear, to recondition the child—Children, the Magazine for Parents.

Her Idea

Little Mary, almost six years old, came home from kindergarten all thrilled, happily saying: "I modeled in clay today, mother." "Well, Mary," said mother, "What did you make?" "Oh, I made the Statue of Liberty." "Why, dear," said mother, "you never saw the Statue of Liberty." "I know that," replied Mary. "I just made it anyway and put a pipe in his mouth."

Lately cotton has tumbled between two and three cents. Perhaps the speculator has method in the depression. That is, to deter the planter from going so strong on cotton. A big crop is hard to handle and the profits are shorter. If that be the reason, it is different from the usual procedure, which is to boost the price of the commodity about planting time, in order to induce greater planting and secure a larger crop.

Harry Sinclair has commenced his term of 90 days in jail for refusing to answer the Senate's questions in the oil investigation. He has been assigned to help the prison pharmacist. And now it leaks out that Sinclair was a drug clerk before he embarked in the oil business. How about calling him "Dr." Sinclair, the oil magnate? He might not enjoy the title, but doubtless it would be as pleasing to him as his present environment.

The Harmless Girl Friend
By MARY DOUGLAS
(Copyright.)
"I HATE you!" cried Sally West. She picked up the answer book and flung it wildly across the room. It hit the blackboard and sprawled helplessly on the last small, prim school desk.

"It's a judgment," Sally choked. "I always loathed arithmetic, and now I have to teach it!" No one answered her. Simply because she was addressing the mute green map of Russia and the pointer with the rubber tip and a long row of empty school seats with upright priggish backs. Then she heard footsteps along the corridor.

"Oh, here you are, Sally West! I've been looking all over for you!" Mathilde was rose-cheeked and laughing. "Billy David is downstairs. Came all the way from New York to see me; and you've got to go down and take charge of him! Yes, you!" Mathilde looked at Sally with satisfaction. Sally was unassuming enough to suit even her jealous eye.

"But what shall I talk about?" "Talk about—me!" Mathilde commanded and disappeared to take the obnoxious study-hour. Sally's knees knocked together as she went down the stairs. A young man was sitting in the stiff school drawing room.

"Are you," asked Sally timidly, "Billy David?" Mr. William Thaddeus Davis rose to his six feet and one inch with perfect ease. His hand swallowed Sally's ink-stained one and he assented to her question with a glint of humor in his brown eyes that went straight to her heart.

"So," he said with a twinkle of a laugh in his voice, "you're to entertain me for one hour and ten minutes—until Mathilde comes back?" Sally looked terrified. "Oh, no, I'm to take care of you! So that you don't fall into the clutches of anyone at all—at least—"

"For one hour and ten minutes let's paint the town red! Get on your hat and your muffler." But when Sally went to put on her last year's coat and the hat she had made herself "catty Miss White" and the "silly kindergarten teacher" were waiting for her.

"You are," said Miss White in a whisper, "to wear my beaver coat! Yes, you must!" "And my brown velvet hat with the gold ribbon—I won't take no!" from the teacher of kindergarten.

That was why ten minutes later when Sally joined William Thaddeus Davis he jumped to his feet and gave a low whistle. They stood before a florist's window and Sally had to keep him from buying an armful of pink roses for her, but she found a great bunch of violets tucked into her coat before she could stop him.

They found a great deal to say, and they laughed at the same things, and not until the first yellow lights bloomed in dusky streets did Sally think of Mathilde.

"Oh!" she said guiltily, "I forgot—Mathilde." "Let's forget her," Bill agreed. "You'll have to telephone her now—at once—and go right back." Billy obeyed.

"You and I," he said gravely coming out of the telephone booth, "are going to have dinner together." They found a little round table in a corner of the Dutch inn. Sally sank down in her chair with just a perceptible sigh. After all, it was over—and there was tomorrow—and all the tomorrows—and she was afraid she was not going to forget this afternoon and Billy Davis.

Got Up In The Morning Feeling DIZZY
"I began to suffer with headache and biliousness," says Mr. John C. Malone, of Bona Vista, Ohio. "I had a hurting through the middle part of my body which seemed to come from indigestion. I would get constipated, and then feel all out of sorts. I would get up in the morning feeling dizzy, and everything I ate would disagree with me. "Someone asked me why I did not try Black-Draught. I found it to be just the medicine I needed. When I feel a spell coming on, I begin by taking a dose of Black-Draught, day or night. I continue to take a few several days, and in a short while I am feeling fine. It is all the medicine I need." Costs only 1 cent a dose.
