It's natural to play. Even adults play—politics, however.

A headline: "Yankees dance in Shanghai." Again the Occident and Orient are in arms.

Her Pal—Elizabeth, your hubby must feel proud of you? New Wife—Why so, dear? Her Pal—For the nice biscuits you serve him.

New Wife—Aren't they nice? I buy them at the A & P Store. They are called "Canine biscuits."

Margaret, (17 yr. old daughter)—Mother, I want to go to Smithfield while you're tearing up to move.

Mother—Why, darling? Margaret—To get out of the dust.

This will be a funny world if all who are trying to become humorous ever arrive.

USE GOOD SUGAR FOR GOOD JAMS AND JELLIES

Buying in Cotton Bags Assures Purity and Full Weight

In buying their sugar for canning and preserving this Summer, Southern women should be particular to buy it in the 25, 10 or 5-pound cotton bags in which it is packed at the refinery.

There are many good reasons for this, the first being that she knows exactly what brand of sugar she is getting, and can tell whether or not it is sugar that has been refined in this country under the strict United States sanitary conditions, by American labor, under the NRA code—or whether it is foreign refined sugar.

The cotton bag also keeps the sugar in the same pure, clean state in which it left the refinery.

In addition, when she buys sugar in a cotton bag, she is stimulating the consumption of cotton—the crop upon which the prosperity of the agricultural South largely depends.

The Savannah Sugar Refinery at Savannah, Ga., (refiners of Dixie Crystals Sugar) alone uses 10,000,000 yards of cotton cloth a year in packing their sugars.

Put up plenty of fruits this summer for use this winter. The price of canned goods, jellies, etc. has gone up materially in recent months, and it is predicted that their price will go even higher. The more you can this summer, the more you will save on your food bill next winter.

ARTHURIAN LEGEND REAL IN TINTAGEL

Memorial Hall Erected to Mythical Warrior.

Washington.—Modern critics may doubt that King Arthur and his Knights of the Table Round ever existed, but in Tintagel Arthuri legend is so real that a stone memorial hall has been erected to the mythical warrior who is supposed to have led the Christian kings of Britain against the Saxon kings of Kent in the Sixth century.

"Tintagel is a lonely, wind-swept village on the northwest coast of Cornwall whose chief claim to fame is the crumbling ruin of a gray old Cliffside castle—one of the most remarkable monuments of antiquity in England," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"Whether or not King Arthur ever conducted his Table Round in the ancient stronghold that crowns Tintagel Head, it is certain that it dates back to an unfathomable age. To Cornishmen it seems logical that a legend which has survived so many centuries must have a respectable origin. So stories of King Arthur, Merlin the Enchanter, and others are preserved, if not strictly believed, in Tintagel.

Just Crumbling Walls. "At Tintagel, as a matter of fact, what the visitor brings measures what he takes away. Come full of the Arthuri legend; come with Tennyson, with Geoffrey of Monmouth, with Malory, and in spite of the cynics, you will savor nothing but romance.

"Nowadays Tintagel castle is but a tracery of crumbling walls on a vast headland, at the foot of which the most superb seas of Cornwall crash and glitter. So far below is the water that even when the thinnest mist is in the air it is hardly possible to see the white foam of the breakers.

"The castle is in two parts, separated by a deep ravine which, legend says, was once bridged. That is was impregnable before the days of artillery or aircraft is evident, defended as it is by steep cliffs and the sea. Roman, Saxon and Norman built here before the Cornish earls of recorded history.

"Today scores of sheep pasture fearlessly on the slippery slopes which plunge so swiftly to the sea. But the iron-studded door of the keep, as in days of yore, is still the only exit and entrance to the headland. Narrow, steep stone steps lead from it down the cliff to the high, narrow causeway linking the head land with the mainland.

"The banqueting hall of the castle is open to the sky and the sun and stars look down in turn upon its turf-clad floor. Grasses grow where once Ygrayne, wife of the duke of Cornwall, watched the siege of Castle Tintagel, on the mainland. When Terabill fell, Uther Pendragon, its conqueror, slew the duke and speedily married his widow the same day. It was from this marriage that King Arthur was born, legend relates.

Ancient Stone House. "The village of Tintagel (also called Trevena) lies about a mile from the castle and sea, at the head of a long, winding ravine. It is not a port, although occasionally a boat with supplies comes in under the cliff to the steep, shingle beach. In addition to a few summer hotels and cottages the village possesses a fourteenth century stone house with a sagging slate roof that gives it the appearance of a swag-backed horse.

"Perhaps this old dwelling was once the residence of minor nobility, in that era when the hall was carpeted with rushes and one dipped with one's own hand in the dinner pot. The common room is uncalled to the rafters, and at one end a little balcony overhangs from which, no doubt, the ladies of the place kept displeased eyes upon their lords at wassail below. The walls are of graystone, the roof of gray slate, while all about the bluest of cornflowers blow.

"The new King Arthur's Hall in Tintagel village is a splendid structure built of Cornish stones of many colors. A corridor around it glows with 49 stained-glass windows, enriched with heraldry of the Knights of the Table Round. The hall itself has 24 stained-glass windows and is lighted by medieval torches on oak shafts. The chief treasure of the hall is a collection of paintings by William Hatherrail, depicting events in Arthur's life."

Three Arkansans Find Way to Aid Themselves

Fordyce, Ark.—Three brothers here are entering into the help yourself program with a real effort.

Oddie Word, Guy Word and Ollie Word have been receiving some relief from the government, but with the discontinuing of the program they have decided to start farming and raising whatever they can.

They found they had no mule to plow their ground, but that didn't stop them. Guy hitched up Ollie and Oddie and they plowed the turn plow while he plowed. They plowed the entire ground and have a crop started. They claim they plowed just as deep as any mule could have done.

Towns Paid Fines

Plymouth, Mass.—A 10-shilling fine was imposed upon the town that didn't keep its ducking stools, stocks and whipping posts in good repair, Puritan records reveal. This ancient form of punishment was found in the statute of the courts enacted November 15, 1630.

Apple Pies: A $25,000,000 Business

ALTHOUGH only New Englanders are said to like it for breakfast, apple pie remains the great American dish. Everyone has seen an apple pie being made in the kitchen, but few people have seen the inside of one of the great apple pie bakeries, such as pictured above.

Two out of every five pies baked in these modern factories are apple pies. Official figures disclose that $25,000,000 worth of apple pies are sold every year in this country—and that of course does not include any figures for home-made apple pies. Roughly, the apple pie industry consumes 2,500,000 bu. of apples a year, 8,000 tons of shortening, 16,000 tons of flour, 20,000 tons of sugar and 78 tons of cinnamon and nutmeg. Just as apple pie is a universal dish, apples are grown in almost every state. Most progressive apple-growers use fertilizer, believing, as does Carl Swinson of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, that its increased use pays enormous dividends. Nitrate of soda is heavily used in apple orchards where abundant growth is wanted.

It's an interesting side-light that thousands and thousands of apple pies eaten in New England are made from apples which were fertilized with American nitrate of soda made in Dixie. Boatloads of American nitrate of soda leave Hopewell, Virginia, every year, carrying this Southern fertilizer to Boston and other northern ports. It's a tribute to the South and to a great Southern industry that these Yankee apple farmers have joined with Southern farmers in saying, "Give me the American nitrate of soda made down South."
