

THE GLEANER

GRAHAM, N. C., JULY 5, 1934.

Local News.

—It rained here Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. It wasn't just a sprinkle.

—A large crowd heard Governor Ehringhaus in Burlington on the Fourth at the dedication of the city Park-Play Ground to the children of Alamance County.

—It is worthy of the highest commendation that the more than seven thousand people in Graham for the Fourth were in a good humor and sober from start to finish, and that even the smell of strong drink was conspicuous for its absence.

Aged Citizen Passes.

James Alfred Scott, 83, after five days illness, died Wednesday morning at the home of his son, George A. Scott, here. Of his eight surviving children, besides George, one daughter, Mrs. Thos. A. Longest, lives in Graham. The deceased was originally from Chatham County. The funeral service was held at the home at noon today, and the burial takes place this afternoon at the cemetery at Siler City.

Judge Carroll Holds His First Court.

Hon. W. H. Carroll, elected last month to the office of Judge of the General County Court, held his first court Monday.

When Judge Carroll called the court to order everybody stood while Dr. P. H. Fleming led in prayer.

Before entering upon his duties he made an address, which was heard by a full court room.

He asked the cooperation of lawyers, officers and citizens to aid him in the discharge of the duties and promised to do his best to hold the scales of justice evenly.

His talk was fine and complimentary on all sides. If he shall be able to conduct the court as outlined, there should be little complaint.

Lot Wanted For New Postoffice Site.

That Graham is to have a post-office building is not a myth.

Uncle Sam is asking for a lot conveniently located upon which to build.

Proposals are to be made and filed, and will be open at Graham postoffice at 9 a. m. on July 23rd.

The approximate dimensions of lot wanted are: corner, 70-foot frontage by 150 feet deep; interior, 90 foot frontage by 150 feet deep.

There are several desirable close in that will answer the requirements.

For lot and building $50,000 is mentioned as an amount that will be available.

Owners of lots should bear the above information in mind and file their proposals as required.

Of a Personal Nature.

That Graham had the biggest and most colorful Fourth of July celebration yesterday is a matter of pardonable pride to all who took any part in it.

It had to have a beginning—some one to start the movement. Mayor Jos. S. Holt was in the forefront when he got out among the business people and asked their cooperation. The response was fine and a meeting was called to frame the plan. Committees were named to do different things.

On one of the most important committees Dan Rader was named and made the chairman. That committee was the dynamo that started and kept the machinery going.

Everybody fell in line and the cooperation and the team work made the event a proud success.

Without withholding anything from anyone, it seems that the big bouquets should be awarded to Joseph S. Holt and Dan Rader without a dissenting voice.

Graham's Fourth of July Celebration—A Big Crowd and Big Success.

Splendid! That's what everybody is saying.

Thousands, some say ten of 'em, gathered here from town and countryside for a big and joyful day. They made it a memorable occasion.

It was an all-day program which started at 10 o'clock and ended at night.

If time and space permitted every event would be detailed. The parade was the first event of the day. It started at W. Elm street, went up N. Maple street and returned down N. Main street to the court house.

A procession a mile long, in close formation, can have lots of things of interest. In brief, that's it.

Boy Scouts; marching veterans; 120th Inf. Band; gaily bedecked automobiles; artistic floats, representing the industries, businesses and organizations; the ox-drawn wagon and the mule cart. All of these, stretching out more than a mile, made a colorful and most interesting program.

Led to the platform at the court house by Col. Don E. Scott, parade marshal, the formal exercises were held.

After the invocation by Rev. R. P. Ellington, Mayor J. S. Holt welcomed the multitude in happy and fitting words.

The speaker, Hon. Gregg Cherry of Gastonia, was introduced by Hon. J. Dolph Long.

The speaker, a World War Veteran, inspired by the occasion, made a fine talk full of patriotism.

He stressed the fact that the first blood of the Revolution was shed at Alamance Battle Ground in Alamance County. That resistance to British rule and oppression met opposition in North Carolina, in many ways well ahead of such in other colonies, but that these have not been blazoned to the world as they deserved.

Dr. Will S. Long and his band of singers sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" with band accompaniment.

After selections by the 120th Infantry Band and announcements, the benediction was pronounced by Rev. J. C. Auman.

Starting at 1 o'clock the remainder of the day, till 7:30 at night, was full. Event after event, here and there at the same time, with large crowds witnessing and enjoying them, took place.

As remembered off-hand the following floats were in the parade: Daughters of the Confederacy; Veterans of Foreign Wars; Happy Hours Kindergarten, Mrs. R. N. Cook; Rich & Thompson Furniture Co.; White Fruit Market; Graham Garden Club; Green & McClure Furniture Co.; Graham Fire Co.; Woody's Cafe.

There were others but they are not recalled now. All of them were artistically decorated and outstanding and deserve honorable mention.

Each one was made more attractive by being ornamented with pretty.

Unavoidable, it is necessary to curtail this story.

Perhaps, next week, something will be mentioned that it was desired to notice at this time. And there may be some corrections to make.

In conclusion, now, it must be said that this community, nor any other one for that matter, ever cooperated more heartily in carrying out an event. But for real team work it could not have been done. It reflected honor on those who led and everyone who helped.

It was splendid. A proud day for Graham. Everyone should feel happy over the successful day.

STRONGER BUSINESS AND STRONGER BANKS

By F. M. LAW President American Bankers Association

DURING the crisis when confidence was shattered, bankers were properly concerned in liquidity. Their main thought was to prepare to meet any demand for withdrawal of funds. They were more interested therefore in collecting loans than in making them.

Now that confidence has been so largely restored banks will naturally resume a more normal lending policy. This does not mean they will or should extend loose or unsound credit; but that in the utmost good faith bankers will perform their proper part in recovery by a sympathetic and constructive attitude in the making of sound loans. Nor should commercial banks make capital or long time loans, for the reason that their loans are made from funds derived from deposits payable for the most part on demand.

When the return of confidence is further on its way, business men will find need for credit in making their plans. Then good borrowers, who for the most part have been so conspicuously absent from the market, will return. They will be warmly welcomed by the banks.

Business Men's Fears Business men have not yet laid all their fears. They worry about what Congress may or may not do. They concern themselves about a trend toward control of business by government. They fear taxes beyond their power to pay. These are real sources of worry and when they are reassured along these lines they will be more inclined to take a fresh look at the future and to make plans to go forward.

As a matter of fact there are tangible evidences of recovery. The Federal Reserve Board officially has stated that prices, wages, business activity and production were back to the highest peak since early in 1931. Commercial failures in the United States are being cut almost in half as compared with the same period last year. It has been reported that the decline in export and import trade was definitely checked in the middle of 1933 and replaced during the last half of the year by a substantial recovery movement.

Among favorable factors is the improved condition of the banks. It is doubtless true that the banking structure of the country has never been in a sounder, stronger and more liquid condition than it is today. My authority for that statement is the Comptroller of the Currency. No longer is there any fear or thought of bank runs. Depositors once more know that their money is safe and the banker, thrice armed in the knowledge of his own strength, is looking forward.

Cats Will Learn Tricks;

Not as Willingly as Dogs

Cats when properly trained have almost as much capacity as dogs for learning amusing tricks. They can be taught to jump through the hands, to sit up and beg and so on, but they do not show anything like the willing cooperation of the dog, according to a writer in the Detroit News.

But the characteristics of no two animals are alike. Starting at the kitten stage, some can be taught through kindness and patience to do many things, from a dignified shaking of hands to a purr for a good dinner. Many cats will learn these things gracefully and perform them nicely, but most, it must be admitted, have to be bribed.

Some say the cat is too smart to do tricks; it refuses to make a fool of itself to amuse its master and his friends. A dog will comply to gain his master's attention and approval; a cat only if anything tangible is the result. Cats often act as alarm clocks. They arrive at the bedroom door at the stroke of eight with demands for breakfast. Some keep even earlier hours. Mark Twain taught his cat, Bambino, to put out his cigar lighter at a signal from him. She would jump onto the table and extinguish the light with her paw.

Other bright cats will impatiently rattle the knob of the door when it is not opened quickly enough to let them in. Others grow proficient in opening doors for themselves.

Forgery of Postage Stamps

Early postage stamps of Great Britain had letters in the lower corners "as an extra precaution against forgery." A different set of letters, running in sequence, was provided for each stamp in a sheet of 240, on the theory that a forger would not provide himself with the many dies, but would issue quantities of identical stamps and so trap himself. The next series of low value stamps had letters in all four corners, this change being made in an attempt to stop the petty knavery of those who pieced together uncancelled parts of stamps and used them for new Postal clerks were supposed to detect misprinted letters, but at the rate mail passed through their hands it is doubtful if many were noticed.

Don't Back Off on Your Handling of French Words

Do not hesitate, then back out and use an English equivalent, when you come upon a French phrase which is familiar to you in print but unfamiliar in pronunciation. Learn the correct pronunciation of such terms, many of which have become a permanent part of our language, then step right up and use them, advises a writer in the Washington Star.

Ensemble: The first two e's have the sound of the broad a in "father." In the last syllable, only the b is pronounced, as though you started to say any word beginning with those two letters, such as "blue," but got only as far as the b.

Menu: Put the two English words, "main" and "you" together, accent them equally, and there you have it.

Chaise longue: That delightful piece of furniture on which one reclines. The ch has the sound of ch in "Chicago," and the aise should rhyme with "sez" (dialect for "says"). "Longue" is pronounced like "long" in English except that the g is emphasized a bit and held on to for an instant.

Chauffeur: The two English words "show" and "fur," put together and spoken with neither word accented more than the other, equal the French "chauffeur."

Table d'hôte: "Table" should rhyme with the English "hobble." The rest of the expression is pronounced as one syllable, exactly like our word "dote."

As a general rule, try to give all French syllables equal accent.

Despite Various Insects, They Are Easily Placed

To identify every insect is beyond the capacity of the wisest entomologist who ever lived, so many kinds are there which entomologists have scientifically named and described. Even if all of them were caught and preserved, and assembled in one place, with the best facilities for studying them, it would be impossible for the human brain to remember the fine details of structure, color and pattern which distinguish each kind from all the others. However, it is not as hopeless a task as it may seem. In a few days one can learn the great important groups of insects that are called "orders" so that 10 per cent of all the insects can be placed in their proper order.

First of all, the orders are: The Coleoptera (or beetles and weevils); the Lepidoptera (butterflies and moths); next, the Hymenoptera (the ants, bees, wasps, etc.). Following these are the Diptera (flies, mosquitoes, etc.); the Hemiptera (the true bugs); the Orthoptera (grasshoppers and crickets, etc.); the Odonata (dragon flies, etc.); the Mallophaga (the biting lice); the Anoplura (the blood-sucking lice); the Neuroptera (the netted-veined insects). Ninety-nine per cent of all the insects which you encounter, will ordinarily belong to one of these orders.
