Al's Changing Mood

"Politics make strange bed fellows" is an old phrase, not so often quoted as it used to be, which does not mean that it has lost any of its virtuous truthfulness. Just as true and applicable in these changing days as ever.

Only a few days ago, about the same time in distant cities, the one time political pals, Alfred E. Smith and Franklin D. Roosevelt, were speaking, not in agreement. Mr. Smith must have felt deep disappointment that Mr. Roosevelt did not in the remotest way refer to him while he stood before a big audience and bitterly criticised the official conduct of his erstwhile pal and declared his support of his old time friend's political foe, Gov. Alfred Landon.

Not so many months ago Mr. Smith let it be known that he would oppose the reelection of Mr. Roosevelt. Notwithstanding his determination, Roosevelt stock took a rise, which may have caused Mr. Smith to make a more decided change in his attitude and come out in the open for Mr. Roosevelt's opponent.

Surely the open support of Mr. Landon by Mr. Smith cannot be a shrewd move to defeat Landon. If it's a sincere change of heart, in all fairness the privilege must be accorded Mr. Smith, however untimely and strange it may appear.

Eight years ago Mr. Smith was the favorite of millions for Chief Executive, notwithstanding his religious creed and his position on alcoholic beverages. He was the Democratic opponent of Mr. Hoover, who had some difficulty in making up his mind about his political affiliation.

Mr. Smith, though he lost, wanted a second deal. He had been Governor of New York State, which appears to be a stepping stone to the nomination for President. He had helped to make Mr. Roosevelt Governor. Again the Democrats looked to New York for a candidate and in looking they overlooked Mr. Smith and began to consider Mr. Roosevelt. It went with a bang, to the utter dismay of Mr. Smith. It rancored Mr. Smith and he does not seem to have recovered. And now he is making an unenviable spectacle of himself, started immediately upon the nomination of Roosevelt, and is going the limit. Those that supported his candidacy will not follow his lead in his bold venture, and what help he will be to Mr. Landon is entirely prolempical. May be Republicans prefer he had not entered their camp.

A HOUSE-TO-HOUSE CANVASS

That is the Plan of Democratic Chairman J. Wallace Winborne

Raleigh, Oct. 7th.—State Democratic Chairman J. Wallace Winborne this week called upon his county and precinct organizations to make a house-to-house canvass every voter in North Carolina. He plans the most systematic and complete organization ever undertaken in the State.

The first step of Chairman Winborne's plan is for the precinct committeemen and women to ascertain the political preference of every eligible voter in their precinct. The lists completed they are to be checked against the registration books—which open Saturday, Oct. 10th—in order that the workers may learn the names of those Democrats not registered and get their names on the registration books as soon as possible. Finally, the lists will be used by the poll workers and "haulers" on election day in an effort to see that every Democrat gets to the polls and casts his or her vote.

"I have been asked why we are making such a thorough campaign when there is no danger of losing either State or National ticket," said the Chairman. "The answer is simple. An overwhelming Democratic majority this fall would be of the greatest value to the party and to the State in its relationship to the federal government. To pile up a heavy Democratic majority both for President Roosevelt and for a Democratic administration which would give him 100 percent cooperation could not only help North Carolina in the eyes of the national administration, which will be Democratic again.

"And there are other reasons why North Carolina Democrats should not just coast along this fall. A county's representation in the State Democratic Convention depends upon the size of its vote for Governor. A county in which the Democrats don't take the trouble to go to the poll will not have its proper representation in the party for the next four years."

Mrs. J. B. Spilman, State Vice-Chairman, has called upon the women members of the precinct committees to offer their services to the men in making the canvass and in checking the registration books. These books will open Saturday and remain open through Saturday, October 31st. Each Saturday during that time they will be at the voting places. On other days they are available at the registrars' homes.

Treat Small Grain To Free Seed From Smuts

Smuts in wheat and barley can best be controlled by treating the seed with fungicides or hot water to kill the fungus organisms.

Planting seed that has never been affected also is good, said Dr. Luther Shaw, extension plant pathologist at State College, but sometimes it is hard to get seed perfectly free from disease.

A few smutty heads in a field are capable of infesting a large percentage of the seed produced on the farm, and threshing machines can spread the spores from one farm to another.

Oat smuts can be controlled either by planting a disease-resistant variety or by treating the seed with a fungicide, Dr. Shaw added.

The treatment recommended differs with the type of smut and the kind of seed.

Treat loose smut by immersing the seed in hot water. Keep wheat 10 minutes in water that has been heated to 129 degrees Fahrenheit. Barley should be left 13 minutes in water with a temperature of 126 degrees.

A fungicide dust will kill the covered smut spores. Treat wheat with 1/2 ounce of ethyl mercury phosphate dust to each bushel of seed, or 2 to 2 1/2 ounces of copper carbonate dust (50 per cent copper).

Both covered and black loose smuts in barley may be eradicated by dusting each bushel of seed with 1-2 ounce of ethyl mercury phosphate dust or 3 ounces of formaldehyde dust.

This last treatment will also kill covered and loose smut in oats.

The simplest and most effective home-made machine to use in treating seed with fungicide dust is the barrel mixer. It should not cost more than $5 to make and with proper care it should last indefinitely.

A diagram showing how to make such a duster, together with a detailed discussion of smuts and smut control methods may be secured free from Dr. Luther Shaw, State College, Raleigh.

Pictures Determine Atmosphere of Room

A selection of good pictures harmonizing with the color and furnishings of a room will bring out latent beauty and atmosphere that would otherwise go unnoticed.

Pictures are constant companions in the home, said Miss Pauline Gordon, extension specialist in home furnishings at State College, and they should be selected with care.

"A bare wall is better than ugly, distasteful, or tiresome pictures," she declared.

In the first place, she continued, a picture should be beautiful. It should also harmonize with the room, suit the space it is to occupy, and be appropriate for the persons who will use the room most.

For example, the living room should not be cluttered up with pictures intended for the nursery or child's bedroom. Likewise, dark or somber pictures should not be placed in the children's rooms.

Omit pictures when color and figure interest of background are sufficient; use a mirror or textile hangings. Where there is enough color but not enough pattern, choose etchings or drawings. With sufficient pattern and not enough color, use strong color pictures.

Place light pictures on light walls and dark pictures on dark walls. Don't place a picture in a frame that is more conspicuous than the picture. Oil pictures require larger, heavier frames than water colors or prints.

Warm color pictures should be framed with warm colors or gilt. Cool colors such as blue, white, or gray should be framed with a cool color or possibly silver.

Fine picture wire should be used rather than large ornate cords. Meidum and small pictures should be hung "blind", that is, to a hook or nail hidden behind the picture. Large rectangular pictures should be hung with two vertical wires, and large round or oval pictures should be hung with a wire going over one hook or hanger in the form of a triangle.

Compliance work has been checked on 2,600 Johnston county farms at a cost of approximately $1.80 a farm.

A recent cooperative order for $400 worth of rye, vetch, clover, peas, oats and barley was made by growers of Duplin county.

D. A. Kiser of Gaston county says that though he had five acres less pasture and much dry weather, he has a better pasture than last year due to the use of the tripple superphosphates.

Sausage, Favorite of Romans
Sausage manufacture really dates from Roman practice. Even during the time of Augustus Caesar a large number of varieties were prepared. There were large sausages that were served sliced, and there were small sausages that were served whole. There were both fresh and cured sausages, although the fresh sausages were practically restricted to home manufacture and consumption. Romans were particularly fond of a sausage composed of pork and white pine nuts, chopped fine, seasoned with pepper, bay leaves, herbs and cummin seed.

Outer Mongolia
The so-called People's Republic of Outer Mongolia came into existence in 1921, when Russian red army troops entered this vast, sparsely populated territory in pursuit of the forces of the white leader, General Ungern von Sternberg. Its international status has been highly anomalous. Theoretically it is still part of China, but no Chinese official may set foot there. The country in the last few years has been barred against all foreigners except Russians.
