Film Companies Sued

[ JNDERTAKING to break up what the government alleges is a great moving picture monopoly, At-torney General Cummings started a civil anti-trust suit against 8 major motion picture producing companies, 25 subsidiary or associated companies and 132 officers or directors, in an effort to divorce production, distribution and ex-hibition phases of the cinema industry.

The suit was filed Atty. Gen. in the federal district court for the southern district of New York. Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard signed an order for the service of subpoenas on all the defendants, directing that each appear before the court in New York within 20 days after being served.

The government is seeking an equity decree, Thurman W. Arnold, assistant attorney general, an-nounced, requiring the companies to divest themselves of ownership of theaters or of production and dis-

SOVIET Russia and Japan, quarreling over a disputed territory at the junction of Manchukuo, Siberia and Korea, were openly threatening each other. Maxim Litvinov Soviet foreign commissar, in conference with Japanese Ambassador Shigemitzu in Moscow, told the latter that Russian troops would not be withdrawn from the area in question, that the territory was a part of Siberia, and that Japan would be held responsible for the consequences if the present "calm" there is dis-The two statesmen used violent language and the situation was considered decidedly delicate.

British Monarchs in Paris

KING GEORGE VI and Queen Elizabeth of England went to Paris for a state visit of four days, and this was regarded as a vitally important event politically. Apparently it was undertaken to let the dictator countries know that Great Britain and France would continue to stand firmly as allies.

Britain's foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax; the French premier, Edouard Daladier, and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet held political talks to discuss the world situation during the visit.

To demonstrate the strength

France can lend the common cause with Great Britain, the French paraded 50,000 men and their latest war machines before George and President Lebrun. This military display outdid that put on in Rome for Hitler, and it was significant that places in the reviewing stand were reserved for the German and Italian military attaches. After the review the royal visitors were sump-tuously entertained at the Palace of Included in the Lewis blacklist are Senators Tydings of Maryland, Adams of Colorado and Lonergan of Connecticut.

Wheat Allotment

H. R. TOLLEY, AAA administra-tor, announced a national wheat allotment for fall and spring planting of not more than 55,000,000 acres - the minimum allowable under the act.

The action, which came as the result of the 967,000,000-bushel yield forecast for this year on a seeded acreage of 80,000,000, came in order signed by M. L. Wilson, acting secretary of agricul-ture.

'Sneak' Flight Over Ocean

DOUGLAS P. CORRIGAN, a young airplane motor expert from California, couldn't get permission from the air commerce bureau to fly across the Atlantic, so he started off secretly from Floyd Bennett field, New York, and land-ed at Baldonnel, Ireland, 28 hours and 13 minutes later.

The remarkable feature of the flight was that it was made in a rickety old single-motored Curtiss Robin plane that was not equipped with navigation instruments, radio or the ordinary safety devices. Corrigan did not even carry a para-

What's Your HOBBAS

Everybody's Doing It: The Banker Has a Toy Railroad, the Butcher is a Camera Fan, and the Baker Collects Stamps!

By JOSEPH W. LaBINE

How do you spend your spare time? Or do you waste it?

There's a difference, you see. It's easy to stand on a street corner and watch the world go by, but you're apt to crawl into bed that night feeling like a fifth wheel on the buggy that makes this world go 'round.

How to utilize spare time is a problem that vexed mankind long before bored monarchs snapped their pudgy fingers to make the pipers play.

Today, in a world of shorter working hours and increased social consciousness, intelligent use of our "loafing" hours is a serious matter. But don't take it seriously; instead, why not find a hobby?

In every walk of life these, days you're apt to meet stamp collectors, candid camera fans and miniature railroad builders. The garage mechanic who tunes up your motor probably tinkers with short-wave radio between the evening meal and bedtime. A United States Supreme court justice may surreptitiously read detective stories when no-body's looking, and your doctor might collect rare old books.

"Cream on Your Porridge."

It's reached a stage where the curious thing to look for is not people who have hobbies, but those who don't. Someone has called it a way to "put cream on your porridge," which means that a not-too-serious hobby will add zest to the most humdrum life. Nor need your worka-day job be humdrum; Henry Ford, one of America's busiest industrial magnates, devotes his spare time to building the famous Greenfield village at Dearborn, Mich. Albert Einstein, the scientist, relates by sawing away at his violin. Andre Kostelanetz, the orchestra leader, is an expert wood carver.

Pick up the paper almost any day and you'll find an item about your next door neighbor's hobby. In Chicago one evening last year, M. J. Smit, a retired gas company superintendent, was visiting a friend's home. The friend remarked that he was going to build a model of the Italian liner, Rex. That set Mr. Smit to thinking and a few days later he started building his own steamship, a three-foot model of the gigantic Normandie.

Mr. Smit, who is sixty-eight years old, suddenly discovered a new meaning in life. "I found I'd been missing something," he says. "It's great fun making model steamships and I'm going to keep doing it that rest of my life."

Ace in the Hole.

A few blocks away Arthur Laederach, an electrical engineer, goes down to his whitewashed basement each evening and works at the hob-by of years' standing-marquetry. This is the science of making land scapes, still life pictures and abstract designs with veneer woods, inlaid to give the proper appearance. It's a hobby that demands use of the jigsaw and a lot of pa-tience. In the end he develops a unique skill that may serve him in good stead should the electrical engineering profession fail him.

That, incidentally, is an important feature of hobbies. More than one amateur tinkerer has turned his avocation into a money-making busi-ness. In Massachusetts a woman who grew up with a liking for tink-ering over old, broken-down bicycles has now made that her business. And a good many years ago the Wright brothers spent their spare time playing with gliders in a deserted spot called Kitty Hawk, N. C. Look what happened to them!

More than one stamp collector has had similar good fortune, turning his hobby into a professional stamp business that netted a living income. And in California the newest avo-cation is "hobby mining," in which amateur prospectors take to the hills each week-end in search of gold. This has resulted in a rush for claims, reminiscent of last century's gold stampede. These modern pros-pectors aren't finding much gold, but they have hopes and meanwhile it's a lot of fun. Some of them will probably strike it rich. Career Hobbies.

Then there's also the hobby which can be joined with your professional career. An example is Mildred Dilling, internationally known harpist who began her rise to fame with a second-hand harp. When she retires from the concert stage, many years hence, she'll have something more tangible than memories, be-cause she spends her spare time collecting old, rare, curious and his-Some hobbies can make you feel like a kid again, which isn't a bad idea. Several years ago some youthful minded father bought his youngster an electric toy train for Christ-mas and had so much fun with it himself that he bought another. That hobby, model railroading, has grown overnight until now many a hard-headed business man spends his evenings playing with a miniature train.

It isn't child's play, however. The serious model railroader builds his own "rolling stock" to exact scale size and has from 200 to 1,000 feet of track on which to run it. Today you can buy disassembled minia-ture railroad parts and build your own system, consisting of engines, Pullmans, coaches and innumerable types of freight cars. Train hobby-ists prefer freights because of the variety they offer.

Or, You Might Try-

There's a humorous side to hobbying, too. Out in Halfway, Ore., Walter W. Evans collects—of all things—official positions! Evans is vice president and cashier of the First National bank, city treasurer, high school clerk, secretary-treasur-er of the telephone company, key banker for his county banking association, public education committee man for the same organization, and president of the Northwest Oregon Bankers association. Recently he decided to run for justice of the

Then, in Akron, Ohio, we find Walter Thompson, a gasoline station at-tendant who in the past two years has dissuaded 10 persons from suicide. That, says Thompson, is his hobby. His station is located at the end of a bridge. At nearby Cleve-land a strange fellow who jumped through the trees at Brookside park, clad in a tiger skin breech clout, turned out to be nothing more than a Tarzan hobbyist. But police warned him to practice elsewhere.

Maybe the suicide stopper and the amateur Tarzan aren't true hobbyits but to discover here. ists, but to discover how important this business has become, you need only look at one of the exhibitions staged by people who have found a happy pastime and are willing to tell the world about it.

Famous People, Quaint Hobbies.

Famous people sometimes have unique hobbies. Jane Pickens, the songstress, weaves rugs and makes bobbin lace because it gives her time to think. Chester Morris, the movie star, is an amateur magi-cian and Dr. Frank Black, musical director for a broadcasting network, plays with chemistry during his spare time. Right now he is experimenting with liquid rubber to use in making sculpture molds.

Perhaps you already have a hobby. If not, take a little sage ad-vice from the experts before developing one.

The best way, they say, is to fall into something you really enjoy. Don't deliberately look for a hobby; simply drift into a stimulating avo-cation that brings you real enjoyment.

Another thing, don't be too strict the whole thing will suddenly become very irksome.

If you're not careful, your hobby is apt to take too much time at first You may get so enthusiastic that life becomes one continual menta tussle between your hobby and your better self. But eventually you'll emerge from this stage with a balanced viewpoint, having learned to live with this new companion.

You'll discover that moderation in all things is an excellent idea, but what's more important, you'll not be alone with a pair of twiddling thumbs the next rainy afternoon!

SON THOUGHT DEAD TURNS UP AT HOME

Greets Mother, 'Hello, Mom," She Moans and Faints.

MASONTOWN, PA .- The identity a youth buried in a little cem tery near here became a mystery with the return of fifteen-year-old Donald Fiore from a two-year hitchhiking trip.

For Donald's parents buried there a year ago the body of a lad they believed was their son, missing since February, 1936. The body was that of a boy shot accidentally while playing postoffice—a kissing game—in a darkened room of an Olive Hill Ky home.

Hill, Ky., home. On a little steel marker above the grave, tended carefully and cov-ered with flowers by a grieving mother, was a card inscribed, "Don-ald Fiore, died April 26, 1937."

"I Buried You a Year Ago."

When Donald, a tall, handsome lad with a friendly smile, came home, he completed the last 17 miles of the journey home afoot, and he stopped first to visit Father Francis Kolb. As he walked into the home the priest looked up from his desk, incredulous.

"Why, I buried you a year ago, didn't I?" he exclaimed.

Then Donald heard for the first time of his supposed death.

Donald's stepfather, Raymond Fiore, operates a tailoring shop. As Donald walked into the store, the father hurried to the front, expecting a customer. He stared unbelievingly at the husky youth.

"Hello, pop," Donald smiled. The father called Mrs. Fiore. "Hello, mom," Donald greeted

Now that her son is home, Mrs. Fiore will not forget the grave with its flowers. She said a tombstone already ordered, will bear the name "Donald."

Injured Dog Wanders Off; Found in Plane Search

DES MOINES.—An automobile accident which befell Butch, a kindly faced Springer spaniel, resulted in an airplane search, a planeambulance ride, and hospitalization for the dog the other day.

Butch, owned by Robert Siman, flight instructor of the Des Moines flying service, took off for parts unknown after being hit by a car.

After a futile search by car, Si-man took off in a plane. Flying at 500 feet he finally spotted the dog in a ravine west of Fort Des Moines army post.

Siman landed in a field nearby, about your hobby, because if you tie yourself up with a lot of restrictions to the airport with Butch in the plane, and took the dog to a veterinarian by automobile.

The dog suffered only minor internal injuries.

With Lighted Cigarette NEWARK N. J.—A sparrow that fluttered about with a lighted cigarette in its beak was blamed by Patrolman Martin Heisele for a fire that damaged a roof. The officer reported the fire as "apparently caused by a bird carry-ing a lighted cigarette to its nest under the eaves."

The Silver Didn't Rot LOOMIS, NEB.—Eight years ago Charles E. Ericson lost his billfold while cultivating corn. Recently Earl Thorell, present occupant of the same farm, found the billfold in the same field while burning weeds. The paper money in it had rotted, but two silver dollars re-
