WAR CONVERSATION

Stalin (quite confused)—Where am I?

Hitler—You mean, "Where are we?"

Chamberlain—You boys shouldn't have any trouble getting your bearings; you planned it this way, Mussolini (sarcastically)—That's what THEY thought!

Hitler (to Stalin)—I thought you had an army.

Stalin—So did I!

Hitler—The secret of victory is a swift powerful attack, a terrific body blow. Why didn't you do just as I did in Poland?

Stalin—There were no Finns in Poland.

Chamberlain (wearily)—I wish you would stop arguing; I want a little peace.

Both—A little is all you'll get.

Chamberlain—Oh, I dunno; I'm not doing so badly.

Hitler—And you're not doing so good, either.

Mussolini—You're all terrible. Do you know what I'd do if I was in this war?

All—No, and we probably never will!

Mussolini—Look at me. I don't pay any attention to war.

Hitler—I don't know whether to trust you or not.

Mussolini—The feeling is mutual, Adolf.

Chamberlain—As I recall things, Adolf, you were going to have this war over in no time. It was to be done in one mighty blow.

Hitler—Can't you wait?

Chamberlain—I can; but can YOU?

Stalin—What's worrying me is what those Finns have that I haven't got.

Hitler—They haven't a thing, and it's time you found it out.

Mussolini—Will you all keep quiet, please.

All—What for?

Mussolini—I'm trying to map out a policy.

Hitler—You and I mapped out a policy last summer.

Mussolini—Things are a lot different now.

Hitler—You're telling me!

Daladier—Do I hear people talking?

Hitler—Have you been asleep all through this?

Daladier—Why not; you've done nothing to keep me awake.

Stalin (to Hitler)—Are you going to stand for a crack like that, comrade?

Hitler (wincing)—Don't call me comrade.

Stalin—Listen, you called me comrade first. Have you forgotten?

Hitler—I wish I could!

"The Name Is Familiar"

BY FELIX B. STREYCKEMAN and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Solon WHEN we want to say that a man is wise we call him a solon and we call lawmakers solons, too.

That name isn't just a first name or a last name—it is all the name the man had and all he needed.

He wrote or rewrote practically all the laws that were in existence during his time and was the first lawmaker to devise a code that gave people rights instead of merely prohibiting them from doing this or saying that they must do that.

His laws were crudely written on wooden cylinders and set up in public places for everybody to read.

THE kelvin, a commercial unit of electricity; Kelvin's law for measuring the most economical diameter of an electric wire; Kelvin, or absolute, temperature scale, which begins at 561 degrees below zero Fahrenheit; and the Kelvinator, the first electric refrigerator for household use, were named for Lord Kelvin of Largs, Scotland, one of the greatest and most practical scientists of all time.

He invented flashing signals for lighthouses; designed an oil-floated self-leveling magnetic compass which allowed this instrument to be used on steel ships; invented the ultra-sensitive detecting and recording apparatus that made the trans-Atlantic cable possible—and became chief executive of the cable company to supervise its laying; reduced temperature to a mathematical basis and announced absolute zero where there is no heat and where molecules stand still.

His name was William Thomson and he was born in Belfast in 1824, the son of a professor of mathematics at the Royal Academical Institution of Belfast. As early as 1852 he foresaw the practicability of heating and cooling buildings by means of currents of air.

When he built a mansion of his own in 1874 on the Scottish coast, he built in heating ducts and ventilating facilities. When he died in 1907, he had received every degree a scholar could obtain and had made a fortune of many millions of dollars.

'Rich as Croesus' WHEN a man is so rich that he actually reeks with wealth, we call him a Croesus. The word is pronounced like those things in a man's trousers—and we don't mean wrinkles, like in ours.

But don't misunderstand—we don't call a rich man a Croesus because he is the only one who can afford them in his pants. Perhaps we never should have brought the matter up.

Croesus is a word for a rich man and goes 'way back to 560 B. C., when the original Croesus, a Greek king of Lydia, was born. He was richer than any king before him, hence the use of his name.

Living in the time when men wore togas, you can see that he didn't even wear pants—or did they wear pants with togas? Now we are sorry we brought the matter up.

Lydia, at the time Croesus was king, included practically all of Asia Minor, and his wealth was obtained mainly from the mines and gold dust of the river Pactolus. Proud of his treasures, he carried his love of splendor to extravagance and thought he was the happiest of men.

All of which proves it isn't the number of pairs of pants you have that makes you wealthy. (Reprinted by Western Newspaper Union.)

Strange Facts Whose Signature? 'Proxy Parents' Live to Collect In a recent experiment the Chicago Police Crime Detection Laboratory had seven college professors differentiate between four samples of their signatures, one being genuine, one an expert forgery, one a tracing and one written with no attempt at imitation.

A new organization in New York supplies capable young women between the ages of 20 and 30 years to act as "proxy parents," taking children to theaters, schools, parties, dentists' offices and on shopping tours. They also stay with children while parents are away for the week-end, and meet trains and chaperon girls who come to the city for a visit.

In Great Britain, the fees of barristers, or trial lawyers, still are regarded as gratuities and, therefore, cannot be collected through legal action.
