The Everglades—Once a Waste Now Center of Sugar Industry

A dozen years ago the Florida Everglades were barren and unproductive. Today they are the center of a sugar industry which provides more than 5,000 provides more than 5,000 people with employment and which spent over a million and a half dollars in 1940 for materials purchased in 19 other states. The ten plantations of the United States Sugar cor-United States Sugar cor-poration spread over thousands of acres of these glade lands. These photos show what goes on during the harvest season at Clewiston, Fla.

The girls at the left look very industrious, but they are only out for a frolic in the sugar cane.

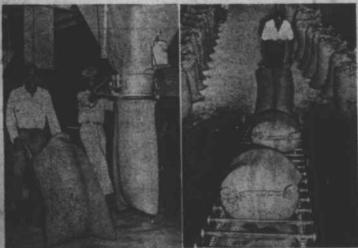

As grown in the Everglades sugar cane is cut in the field, moved in tractor wagons to the railroad, and hauled by train to the raw sugar mill at Clewiston.

The harvest garnered, the cars are locked to the rails and tilted. The cane is now on its way to become sugar. Planting is planned to provide canes which mature on a regular schedule during a six-month period.

The raw sugar flows into sacks from automatic weighers, each sack escalator go the sacks to the freight cars, then to the refinery, where the boy releases a trigger.

The sacks are weighed again, later.

Jones was sitting with his wife behind a palm on a hotel veranda late one night when a young man and a girl came and sat down on a bench near them. The young man began to tell the girl how pretty and good and lovable he thought she was. Hidden behind the palm, Mrs. Jones whispered to her husband:

"Oh, John, he doesn't know we're here and he's going to propose. Whistle to warn him."

"What for?" said Jones. "Nobody whistled to warn me."

Isle of Cats

One of the queerest and most desolate spots in the world is Frigate, a low coral island 300 miles northeast of Mauritius, in the Indian ocean. It is inhabited solely by cats, the descendants of the chipurceled there some 80 solely by cats, the descendants of two shipwrecked there some 80 years ago. They are large and fierce, and exist mainly on fish, which they catch in the most ingenious manner. They form a circle on a dry reef reaching to the water's edge, and at low tide close in, driving the fish into shallow pools and channels. Then they pick them out and tear them with razorlike claws.
