I was afflicted for several years with disordered liver, which resulted in a severe attack of jaundice. I had as good medical attendance as our section affords, who failed utterly to restore me to the enjoyment of my former good health. I then tried the favorite prescription of one of the most renowned physicians of Louisville, Ky., but to no purpose; whereupon I was induced to try Stramons Liver Regulator. I found immediate benefit from its use, and it ultimately restored me to the full enjoyment of health.

AN ARGUMENT.

"But, mama," said Minnie, look. ing grave but determined, "I shall have to wear this dress, because my only other white one that is clean is too, tight for anything; it burts me so that I can hardly breathe."

"I'm sorry, daughter," the mamma said, with an equally determined face; "but you surely see that such a delicate muslin as that you have on is not suitable to wear services every Sunday, morning and to a lawn party. It will tear as night. Prayer meeting every Wednesday easily as lace."

> "But I've got to wear it, you see," said Minnie, with a touch of impatience in her voice. "You don't want me to wear tight clothes, you know."

"And what reason have you found for wearing that broad . blue ash?

"Well, mamma, you know it is the only one that matches nicely with this dress and these stockings, and things ought to match." "Yes; and way must the stockings be worn ?" "Oh, well," said Minnie, catching an end of the sash and twisting it, "I suppose I could wear other stockings, but I though with my nice new slippers these would look the prettiest, and I dida't think you would care."

"Does it seem to you that "nice new slippers," that were bought to wear only in the house, are the proper things for lawn parties?"

"No'm; but I had to put them on. My boots have the ugliest great nails sticking into my toes; I could hardly walk around last night; so. of course, I had to put on the slp-

Very grave looked the mamma. It was a sad fact that she had never heard of the dress that was too tight, or of the fearful nails in the high-buttoned kid boots, until this moment. Could it be possible that her little daughter was tempted, by her desire to appear in fine new clothes at the party, to speak not quite the truth? Shesat thinking for a full minute before she decided that her child needed a severe lesson. -

"Minnie," she said, and the little girl new that when her mother spoke in that tone, and called her by her full name, there was no e ance for argument, "you cannot wear that dress, and that sash, and those slippers and stockings, to the lawn party."

Now it was Minnie's turn to consider. She looked down and fitted the toe of her slippers most carefully into a figure of the carpet.

Well," she said at last, drawing a long sigh, and looking on her heart, "Lsuppose I can go and change all my things; but I shall be very late. It is time to go

"Yes," said the mother, her face most sad, "you may change all your things. Put on the calleo that you were this morning, and your every-day boots."

"Mamma!" gasped Minnie, "don't you mean to let me go to the party?"

"There is nothing for you to wear, my daughter. I suppose you would not like to go in your every-day clothes, and you say your other white dress is too tight, and the order; but you know you have never said anything about it before." Then was Minnie's face very red. "I can wear them, mamma," she said, turning away. "They are stand it. "No, daughter, I cannot allow you to "stand it." You know I do not wish you to dress so you can "hardly breathe," nor wear snoes in which you can "hardly walk around." I see nothing for you but to remain at home." Then did poor Minnie burst into a flood of tears! She poured the words out very fast. Her dress was not too tight, she did not have any trouble to breathe, and her shoes did not hurt her but just a speck, and she could wear them as well as not.

"Minnie!" said her mother, breaking into the midst of this storm of words "Then what have you been telling your mother?"

Poor little Minnie! It was a lesson. She went to no lawn party. that afternoon; she sat on the back piazza in her dark calico dress and thick boots, and sobbed. She had grown so used to making little bits of things into great ones, when it suited her convenience to do so, that she actually did not realize that she was telling what was untrue. I know other little people who have the same bad habits .-The Pausy.

DON'T DO IT.

A sharp-turned paragraph in a paper I have just laid down says something mean about old maids. why guy the old maids? Every pert paragrapher flashes his wit at the defenseless maiden well up in years. It isn't right, and he ought to be ashamed of himself. Dog-gone a man, anyhow who will poke fon at a woman. A h, many man, you little know the sorrow sometimes concealed beneath the prim exterior of the old maid. You cannot ken the blighted hope. the withered love, the bright dreams unrealized, the apple of ashes fell to her lot, and that made her an old

Go on funny boy; poke your cheap wit at the dear old girl; say alleged humorous things about her and make her feel bad in her loneliness. Some day you may need the old maid, and O1 you mirth-provoking son-of-a-gun, may she be on hand when you want her, with every drop of Christian charity squeezed out of her heart, and gall and bitterness in its place to make it pleasant for you. O! so pleasant that you will wish you were dead and buried 1,700 feet under the ground before you ever poked fun at the old maid.

And there is the mother-in law, Mister Funny Man-you poke fun at her too. 8 me day, good sir, you will be married, and it's shekels to dried apples that your wife will have a mother who knows you like a book, and who, to use the vernacular of the street "has it in for you." I hope she will give you a regular red paint razzle dazzle me boy, and that she will make you walk the floor and groan and curse the day you were born. You know that the mother-in-law is not all that she is painted. Why, what would we do without the motherin-law? [Not me-what are you smiling at?] The dear, good, kindly old soul who overlooks the faults of her daughter's husband, and who smooths out the household wrinkles, and keeps things straight, and sees that they are started in life properly, and often comes in handy when there is a bill to pay and no money to pay it what would fellows do without a mother in law? Gentlemen—I have had enterrh for over three years. For three years I have had pains over my eyes. I often could not sleep, not being able to breathe through my nose. I was not able to smell anything for three years. In this sad plight, last spring, I began taking 8. S. S. I took one dozen bottles. The painsleft my forehead, my smelling faculty returned, I could sleep soundly This is the happy result of your medicine. I have felt no symptoms of the return of the disease unsymptoms of the return of the disease until the very wet and cold season setin, and even then, I was so much better than I had been for three years, that I felt like a different man. I am going to take a few bottles this spring, so as to completely eradicate every remnant of the disease. My general health is greatly improved since I began taking your medicine, and my disordered kidness restored to their normal functions.
