Max Dwight's Reward.

BY MRS. M. SHEPPARD-PETERS. Max Dwight was ready for his daily tramp to the upland lake...

Mistress Janet accompanied him to the porch of their cottage, carrying Tottie, who in her pink and white prettiness of babyhood...

Always observant, he noticed that the creek was steadily rising. The rain must have flushed the lake considerably, he thought...

The fear he had shaken off leaped up on him and tore at his vitals again. As his gaze darted along the embankment to the left...

as he looked out he uttered a cry, and turned back to Janet. She hurried to him, and this was what they saw: a sheer precipice dropping from their door into the turbulent waste of waters boiling along the ledge...
